Will Give Speech At Church Meet

Address on Radio Also Considered to Meet Growing Storm.

By Elliott Thurston.

President Roosevelt plans to make a vigorous reply to critics of his monetary policy.

Officials close to him said yesterday he may discuss the much-debated gold-buying program when he addresses the Federal Council of Churches here next Wednesday. This is the only public address now on his schedule. He already is at work on the speech.

Some of his advisers indicated that if he decides this occasion is inappropriate for discussing so controversial a subject, he may resort again to his favorite medium, the radio. In any event, he is reported to have in preparation a high-powered answer to the critics. Some of his advisers have urged him to hit back before the dissension accumulates more velocity or rends party lines further.

Two "Outs" Suggested.

Exponents of the gold-buying experiment, intended to raise commodity prices by driving the dollar down, contend the President can rout much of the criticism by emphasizing that he is still committed to ultimate restoration of some such "modernized" gold standard as his erstwhile adviser, James P. Warburg, is demanding. Likewise, they hold, the President can banish fear of "greenbacks" by emphatically disavowing the purpose to go to the printing presses for money.

Discussion of policy in the last few days has brought to the forefront the Administration argument that much of the public controversy rests on mistaken assumptions, and that Al Smith, B. M. Baruch, Prof. O. M. W. Sprague and others who have become conspicuously vocal are warning against a kind of inflation which the President has avoided so far and means to avoid in the future.

Gold Price Goes Up.

That the Administration intends to go on with the gold buying seems to be attested by another increase yesterday in the R. F. C. price for domestic newly mined gold. The latest artifical price, set after Acting Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau had telephoned from his New York estate to Chairman Jesse Jones of the R. F. C., is $34.01 an ounce, 8 cents above the

Code Violator Assessed $400

Conviction in First NRA Prosecution Hailed by Ickes.

New York, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—The Government's first prosecution for violation of an NRA code resulted today in a $400 fine for the Hercules Gas Stations, Inc., of Brooklyn.

The company and its executives withdrew their original plea of not guilty to the indictment, and on a guilty plea were fined by Federal Judge Clarence G. Galston.

David Lind, president of the company, and Moe Levine, vice president, each received a fine of $100 and the company was fined $200.

Judge Galston, in imposing the fine, said he was exacting a promise from the defendants that they comply strictly hereafter with the code.

The company was accused of working employes 66 hours a week, whereas the petroleum code prescribes a 48-hour week. Another charge was that the price of gasoline was not posted properly.

"Signal Victory" Seen.

Secretary Ickes, Oil Administrator, yesterday said the conviction in the filling station case in New York was a signal victory for the Federal program of enforcing the petroleum code.

Three Brooklyn residents accused of violating labor provisions of the code pleaded guilty.

"The case was the first criminal prosecution under the oil code to reach a final conclusion and represents a signal victory," Ickes said. "The outcome of the case is most gratifying. It should serve as a warning to other violators of any provision of the code.

"The many in the industry who are honestly attempting to abide by the code may be assured that the few who attempt to operate contrary to its provisions swiftly will be brought to justice."

EVA LE GALLIENNE.

ETHEL BARRYMORE.

Philadelphia, Dec. 1 (AP).—Criticism with all the emotional fire of melodrama was heaped today on their audience by two of America's best known actresses, Ethel Barrymore and Eva Le Gallienne.

It was home-coming with a vengeance for Miss Barrymore, whose grandmother years ago managed a theater in this city. Here Ethel lived as a girl.

She came to Philadelphia to take up the verbal sword for Miss Le Gallienne, who had been criticized for not appearing for a lecture a week ago. She spoke after Miss Le Gallienne drove home the first rapier thrusts at 300 members of the Philadelphia Lecture Assembly.

"Miss Le Gallienne does you great honor to be here," asserted Miss Barrymore, voice trembling. "I do you honor to be here. I don't see why we bother to speak to you at all.

"You have no appreciation. You don't know anything. You never have known anything. You never will know anything.

"We've worked. We've sacrificed. We've tried to please you. Pfht! What difference does it make?"

U. S. Inflation Called Legal Confiscation

Col. Theodore Roosevelt Holds Middle Class Greatest Losers.

Addressing the Civic Forum at Town Hall, the former Governor General of the Philippines said that in event of inflation "all those who through their thrift have amassed savings will have all or a portion of their savings confiscated."

"Under the law," Col. Roosevelt added, "such money as widows and orphans have in trust is all in bonds or securities of that type. Therefore, widows and orphans head the list of those from whom money is confiscated.

"Next in line are those who live on pensions. Whatever per cent the currency is debased is levied as a direct contribution on them.

24 Billions in Savings.

"Then come the people with accounts in the savings banks. There are 44,352,106 accounts in institutions in the United States. They represent $24,271,346,000. The average account is $547.47. By debasing the currency, a percentage of each of these is confiscated. If the currency, for example, were debased 50 per cent, ultimately that would amount to taking $12,000,000,000 from these people.

"The wealthy do not put their money in savings banks. An inflation policy, therefore, strikes directly at those who can least afford to bear it. That money represents provision for old age, a back-log in case of sickness or accident in the family, savings toward purchasing a home, money for the education of children. It is that which is confiscated under inflation.

"Next in line come the life insurances. They, too, represent

R. F. C. Loans Query Clears Jesse Jones

Senators Report Board Chairman Did Not Profit on Deals.

Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, was exonerated yesterday by a Senate subcommittee of personal profits through R. F. C. loans to three Texas mortgage companies.

Answering charges of various Texas lawyers, the committee declared the loans to be "justified and amply secured."

The complaints stated that through loans to the Bankers Mortgage Co., Midland Mortgage Co. and Southern Investment & Loan Corporation, all of Houston, Tex., Jones and members of his family enhanced their own personal interests.

Dawes Bank Loan Sifted.

The committee, in addition to disposing of the Jones charges, proceeded with its inquiry into the establishment of mortgage companies by banks for the purpose of borrowing from the R. F. C. without the publicity attendant upon direct borrowing.

Investigation into loans made to the Central Republic Bank & Trust Co., of Chicago, of which former Vice President Charles G. Dawes is chairman, also is being pursued by the committee.

In their general R. F. C. investigation, the senators have learned that loans by the Governmental cor-

Bar Ideal—The Liquor's Rare And All Drinks on the House

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 1.—Annapolis now has the answer to the dream of the poor man who is wont to look upon the wine when it is red and the gin when it is white.

In the best apartment house in town may be found a barroom that never closes, where all drinks are on the house and where guests are served the best of imported liquor.

Indeed, this is a barroom among barrooms. It does not have a bouncer. There even are two or three beds for gentlemen who lurk too long around the flowing bowl.

Yes, there is a trick in it, of course. In order to get in, you must either be a member of the State Legislature or a friend of a member. And they do say the members have a lot of friends.

Strange as it may seem, few of the lawmakers like to speak of the barroom. Only one delegate of a number questioned would comment on the popular rendezvous. He confided it was located on State Circle in the shadow of the Statehouse. Pressed, he added:

"I don't know much about it, but they tell me the key's been thrown away."

Further inquiry developed the favorite drink of the solons came from bottles labeled, "Weston's Special Reserve Scotch, Bottled in Scotland by Weston & Son, London and Glasgow."

This gathering place of the elect boasts about two of its habitues. No, they're not lawmakers, the pair of whom so many laudable things are said—they're bartenders of the old school. Trained in pre-prohibition days, they look with suspicion on speakeasy lackeys. They are exponents of a revived art, the mixing of rare drinks, and the potions they prepare have brought no complaints.

Scotch First To Ship U.S. Legal Rum

4,800,000-Gallon Quota Permitted to Enter at This Time.

Shipload Starts Today as Importers Agree on Marketing.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

In order that the first shipload of beverage liquor to enter this country legally in 13 years might leave Glasgow, Scotland, today, Dr. James M. Doran, industrial alcohol commissioner, and Ray Miller, of the Agricultural Department, last night formulated quotas for importers under their new A. A. A. code.

As the two officials undertook to allocate among 500 importers approximately 4,800,000 gallons of alcoholic beverages which will be permitted entry at this time, stevedores worked through the night loading Scotch whisky aboard the liner Cameronia at Glasgow.

Meanwhile many importing firms were incurring large cable costs sending lengthy instructions to whisky distillers in Scotland and Ireland, gin makers in London and Holland and vintners in France, Italy and Germany, directing them to start moving at once huge stocks of these beverages to ship wharves.

Agreement Reached.

All this activity was put in motion when the spokesmen for the liquor importers late yesterday reached an agreement with the special Interdepartmental Alcohol Committee on their code and marketing agreement.

This marketing agreement, which was signed earlier in the day by representatives of 75 per cent of the established importing industry, became effective shortly after 10 o'clock last night when Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace affixed his signature. Approval of the President was not necessary.

The importers agreed to bring into the United States only those quantities of alcoholic beverages authorized by the Government, which has the power to regulate the volume, origin and types which may be imported. Beer, ales, stout and porter are not covered by the agreement, which further provided that the minimum amount of other alcoholic beverages that may be imported from any country shall not be less than the average for a like period between 1910 and 1914.

The importers' code was started by airplane for Warm Springs to receive the approval of President Roosevelt. Meanwhile, the interdepartmental committee went into conference with a committee of brewers to negotiate an agreement on a code for the industry of the latter. This code is expected to be rushed to the President early today.

Plan Self-Rule.

Concentrating on making effective the liquor importers' and brewers' codes, the A. A. A. and special committee postponed until Monday hearings on the proposed code for rectifiers and blenders. The distillers' code is now effective. The newly created Federal Alcohol Control Administration will

Shank Doomed In Poisonings

Akron Lawyer Convicted; Four of Family Slain in Arkansas.

Benton, Ark., Dec. 1 (AP).—Mark H. Shank, Akron, Ohio, attorney, late tonight was convicted of the poison murder of Alvin Colley, who with three other members of his family died near here in a picnic tragedy last August 15. Shank was being tried only on charges of murdering Colley.

The verdict carries the death penalty.

The State, through Prosecuting Attorney Houston Emory, of Hot Springs, said Shank poisoned Alvin Colley to "save his own reputation and keep out of the penitentiary."

Nathan McDaniel, chief defense attorney, asked the jurors if they thought "a man with the brain Mark Shank once had would have perpetrated a crime in as crude a manner as he did."

The five members of the Colley family were stricken violently ill after eating a picnic lunch with Shank near here last August. One child, Clyde, 4, told officers Shank "put something" in grape juice served at the picnic. Clyde survived.

Wife of Gandhi Ordered to Jail

Anand, India, Dec. 1 (AP).—Mrs. Mohandas K. Gandhi, who was arrested November 28 for refusing to leave this district and for planning to participate in a civil disobedience movement, will have to serve the remainder of a six months' sentence imposed August 8, the government decided today.

The wife of the Mahatma was released two weeks after the sentence was pronounced to permit her to nurse her husband, who at that time was engaged in a protest fast.

'Scottsboro' Defendant Given Death

Alabama Jury Convicts Third Time in Girl Attack Case.

Decatur, Ala., Dec. 1 (AP).—The third verdict of death was returned today against Heywood Patterson, 21-year-old Negro, one of seven defendants in the "Scottsboro case," for an alleged attack on a white woman on a freight train.

In a courtroom so quiet the sound of men breathing could be heard, Walter Green, clerk of the court, read the verdict:

"We the jury find the defendant guilty as charged and fix his punishment at death."

The Negro, who twice before has heard identical words read in his case, appeared unmoved.

He was tried on an indictment charging an attack on Mrs. Victoria Price, aboard a Southern freight train on March 25, 1931.

No Sign of Demonstration.

There was not the slightest sign of a demonstration and the spectators, who occupied every available seat, waited until the jury, which was discharged by Judge W. W. Callahan immediately, had filed from the courtroom.

The noise of shifting feet, coughs, and low talk that made a medley of sound had stopped instantly as the knock on the room adjoining the court, where the jury had been deliberating, sounded in the courtroom.

Judge W. W. Callahan was preparing to swear in a jury, just selected for the trial of Clarence Norris, second of the defendants to be called on charges of attacking Mrs. Price, a Huntsville mill worker, when the knock sounded at 5 p. m., and it was 10 minutes later before the jury, grave of face and slow of step, filed in.

Six Deputies on Guard.

Patterson had been brought from the jail, surrounded by six deputy sheriffs and sat watching intently as the new jury was sworn.

Norris, seated beside him, also showed interest in the procedure.

Both Negroes were removed from the courtroom after the verdict was read before the crowd was permitted to move.

Samuel S. Leibowitz, of New York, chief of counsel retained by the International Labor Defense in behalf of the Negroes, asked when Judge Callahan would pass sentence and announced he would file a motion for a new trial which, if denied, would be a step toward the United States Supreme Court.

The fight against the first death sentences imposed on Patterson and his codefendants was carried to the Supreme Court after the Alabama Supreme Court had affirmed the decision of the Jackson County Circuit Court.

U. S. Court Intervenes.

It was after the U. S. Supreme Court had held that the Negroes did not have the benefit of adequate counsel that a change of venue from Jackson County to Morgan was granted.

Neither Leibowitz nor Attorney General Thomas E. Knight, jr., who directed the prosecution, commented on the verdict.

The testimony in the Norris trial was expected to be largely the same as that in the Patterson trial since each side has called the same witnesses.

The defense, however, has interrogatories from Ruby Bates, who was the companion of Mrs. Price on a hobo trip on which the attacks were alleged to have occured and who last spring made a sensational appearance in Patterson's second trial to repudiate her former testimony, that she was molested by the defendant.

2,000,000 Put to Work In 2 Weeks

Hopkins Cites Results in Reply to Smith's C. W. A. Criticism.

Two million men were given jobs during the last two weeks by the Civil Works Administration, Administrator Harry L. Hopkins revealed yesterday in answering criticism of the CWA by Alfred E. Smith. The men will be paid today.

More of these checks will go to workers in Smith's own State, New York, than to any other State, according to figures submitted to Hopkins.

In announcing the estimated number of checks to be used in paying off civil works employes today, Hopkins said, "if putting 4,000,000 men to work puts me in the grapefruit business, I am delighted to be in it. I learned the word 'boloney' from Al Smith, and I suppose the term sour grapefruit juice also belongs to him."

1,183,287 Checks Distributed.

Reports received from 44 States and the District of Columbia on the first week of the program to reemploy 4,000,000 men showed 1,183,287 checks were distributed last Saturday. Payments made in the four States which had not reported up to November 30 will bring this total to 1,250,000, Hopkins said.

In the District of Columbia 9,085 workers were paid last Saturday and 10,348 will be paid today. The District's allotment of workers is 20,000, but thus far there has not been provided sufficient projects to give employment to that number.

Reports of the first week of the civil works campaign revealed that one state, Oklahoma, has filled its quota of 101,000 workers by transferring them from relief rolls to civil works projects. It will be necessary to put additional men to work on Federal works projects, Mr. Hopkins said.

The Administrator corrected an impression gained in some districts to the effect that heads of families were given preference in distribution of jobs over war veterans without families. Hopkins said there was "nothing to" the report.

Normal Jobless Survey.

Hopkins expects for the first time to learn the best possible figure on the number of people in the United States normally unemployed, through a series of surveys now under way.

He said it was his opinion that normally from 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 are unemployed at all times. By subtracting this number from those now out of work, he belives it possible to learn more accurately just how many have been thrown out of employment by the depression.

"We had from 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 unemployed in the country in 1928," he said. "It stands to reason that there must always be such a load of employment, in view of seasonal demands."

Relief Roles Rise 2 Percent.

Reports on the number of families receiving unemployment relief indicated that relief rolls in October increased approximately 2 per cent over the preceding month. Reports from all but six States show a total of 2,851,804 families on relief rolls in October, and other preliminary reports are expected to swell this number to about 3,000,000, Hopkins said. At the end of September 2,794,640 families were on the rolls.

Obligations incurred for relief increased during the same period by 10 per cent and are expected to exceed $65,000,000 for October. The increase, Hopkins pointed out, was due largely to the purchase of clothing and fuel to meet the demands of the needy during the winter, and also to increased living costs.

Citizens Seize Long Workers; Burn Ballots

Louisiana Violence Flares Against "King Fish's" Congress Vote.

Baton Rouge, La., Dec. 1 (AP).—Demonstrating against Senator Huey P. Long and Gov. O. K. Allen, West Feliciana Parish citizens at St. Francisville today seized and burned ballots prepared for a proposed Congressional election next Tuesday and later swarmed on a group of Long-Allen workers, wresting away from them batches of circulars prepared by Senator Long dealing with the election.

The Long-Allen workers were distributing the handbills on the streets when they were surrounded and forced to give them up. Afterward the circulars were publicly burned.

At about the same time, other residents of the Sixth Congressional District went into court here to obtain a new injunction to prevent the State administration from distributing the ballots throughout the district for the election called by Gov. Allen for next Tuesday.

Violence flared in the district for the first time when a group of unidentified citizens this afternoon moved on the West Feliciana Parish Courthouse and seized and burned the ballots with which the State administration hoped to send Mrs. Bolivar E. Kemp unopposed into the vacant Sixth District Congressional seat.

Although a bonfire was made of the ballots in the street in front of the courthouse, a survey afterward failed to disclose any "eye-witnesses" to the incident.

Parish authorities said a door of the clerk of court's office had been forced and the ballots taken from a storeroom.

U. S. May Hunt for Weather Secrets High Above Clouds

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 1 (AP).—A change in U. S. weather forecasting, by using new scientific knowledge of the upper air to make predictions more accurate, was recommended today by the Science Advisory Board recently appointed by President Roosevelt.

"Mass air analysis" is the principal recommendation. It would reach nearly to the stratosphere with 20 to 25 "upper air" stations.

New daily upper air weather maps would be issued, similar to the present twice-daily ground charts. They would cover the upper humidities, temperatures and pressures, as well as flying conditions. This mass-air analysis, the committee states, "unquestionably makes short range forecasts much more reliable."

Upper air analysis has revealed, for example, why storms sometimes end unexpectedly and why others hang on for days after they should be over. These storms are fed by vast lakes of air, cold on one side, warm on the other. The lakes may be as big as several States and miles deep, or considerably smaller.

When they are smaller the storm fuel may run out prematurely and the tempest subside.

"Cold fronts" are another condition needing upper air analysis. They may be half a continent wide, twice the height of the Himalayas and almost as sharply defined as a mountain precipice.

McCarl's Ruling Clears Way for Contract, Says Wallace.

Peace Move Seen In NRA Dispute

Decision May Result in Orders Valued at $1,500,000.

The Department of Agriculture last night accepted the bid of R. P. Sabine, a Ford dealer, on 700 trucks for the Civilian Conservation Corps.

Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson concurred in the decision, which was reached on the advice of Comptroller General McCarl.

The decision came at the eleventh hour, just before bids on the trucks were to expire, and involves complete reversal of the stand previously taken by Gen. Johnson in his controversy with Henry Ford over compliance with the NRA automobile code.

Establishes Precedent.

While announcement of acceptance of Sabine's bid, made last night by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, referred specifically to trucks for the C. C. C., it establishes a precedent which may lead tot purchase from Ford of approximately $1,500,000 worth of motorized equipment for various Government departments.

Low bids entered by Sabine, president of the Northwest Motor Co., for trucks and automobiles of that value have been held up for many weeks, pending settlement of the eligibility of Ford dealers to bid on Government contracts.

In effect, the Comptroller General's ruling, together with the concurrence of the national recovery administrator, constitutes an important decision in Ford's favor.

Moreover, there is a suggestion in Secretary Wallace's announcement that an olive branch is being offered the Detroit manufacturer—that the Government hopes thereby to obtain Ford's compliance with the NRA.

Wallace's Statement.

The announcement read:

"On the advice of the Comptroller General as to the best way to secure compliance with the President's recovery program, and on the concurrence of the Secretary of Agriculture and the National Recovery administrator, it has been decided to accept the bid of the Northwest Motor Co., dealers in Ford automobiles, for the Civilian Conservation Corps.

Sabine, whose vigorous fight to force acceptance of his low bids by the Government resulted in last night's decision, entered a bid of

$80,000 Fine, Costs Levied Against Beer Baron in Tax Case.

New York, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—Waxey Gordon, one of the most powerful beer barons of the Eastern seaboard, was convicted today of evading payment of income tax and sentenced to serve ten years in prison.

Federal Judge Frank J. Coleman, in addition to the prison term, ordered Gordon to pay a fine of $20,000 and the $60,000 costs of prosecution.

Gordon, who wept while his counsel extolled his virtues in his summation to the jury, was prosecuted in the same manner as Al Capone, now in the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta.

The Government charged that four men, who were to have been prosecution witnesses against Gordon, were put on the spot before the case was brought to trial.

The Government charged that in 1930 Gordon's income was $2,090,204, and that he paid, for that year, an income tax of $10.76. In 1931, it was charged, he paid a tax of $2,605 when his income was $2,465,233.

Gen. Johnson Acts to Still Labor Fight

Effort Made to Keep Code Authority Dispute From Congress.

(Associated Press.)

A vigorous effort to prevent a dispute in the coming Congress over labor's right to representation on NRA code authorities was undertaken yesterday by Hugh S. Johnson.

The administrator disclosed this purpose at his first press conference since returning from Warm Springs, Ga., where he conferred with President Roosevelt. Other high lights of this press conference were:

Denial that Gen. Johnson was at outs with either George Peek, farm administrator; Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, or Harold Ickes, Secretary of the Interior and Public Works Administrator.

Of labor demands for code authority representation, Gen. Johnson said he had laid down no hard and fast rules, was consulting with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and his own Labor Advisory Board, and felt personally there was a big question as to whether labor "really wants" to have a voice in running industry.

Coal Panel Undecided.

He said the Bituminous Coal Code Authority's panel of Government representatives had not yet been approved by the President, and that whether John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, would get one of the places was not decided.

Edward F. McGrady, the assistant administrator for labor, was present to deny published stories that the Federation of Labor was planning an onslaught on the NRA in the next Congress, and it was disclosed that McGrady had talked with Chairman Connery of the House Labor Committee, who issued recently a statement criticizing the NRA.

"The federation is supporting the NRA," McGrady said.

Gen. Johnson said he believed there would have to be "a provision in connection with every code one way or another, for a board on which labor has representation to sit on disputed questions of hours and wages of labor."

"Management By Labor"

"This goes farther, however," he added. "The code authority with those questions divorced—is in a way the management of an industry. It seems to me that when labor assumes responsibility for management, they are changing their own traditional position.

"They will have to take responsibility for profit and loss—questions which they have never had and never wanted. This is not a final opinion of mine, but that is the way it presents itself to me."

Stage Stars Heap Wrath on Crowd

Turning to Miss Le Gallienne, the princess of drama's "royal family" asserted:

"I found this child.

"She has done more for the American theater than any one. She is gallant—she has gone on and made these young actors and actresses—and you dare to criticize her for not coming to some meeting she did not know anything about!"

Explains Absence.

Miss Le Gallienne, who said she had not appeared last week because she did not realize the lecture was scheduled, told the audience she was "very disappointed in all of you."

"I should think by this time you would have a little faith," she exclaimed. "If you knew the discipline in the theater—how we work to please you; how we work whether mothers and sisters are dying. Do you think this sort of training would let us fail to keep appointments?"

After the meeting Mrs. Arthur Waters, chairman, called Miss Barrymore's criticism "the greatest insult a Philadelphia audience ever had." She said, however, she believed Miss Le Gallienne was "completely justified."

Body of Woodcutter Found in Bloody Tent.

Kentland, Ind., Dec. 1 (AP).—John Cox, 27-year-old woodcutter, was found dead at Lake Village today in his blood-spattered tent, which was strewn with bloody weapons. Any of them, Newton County authorities believed, might have been used to kill him.

The top of Cox's head, Coroner Edward J. Dieder said, had been blown off by a shotgun. His throat was slashed. Near the body lay a bloody ax. A six-pound hammer and a block of wood were covered with blood and hair.

Outside the tent, a trail of blood led 50 yards to a pump, the handle of which was smeared with blood.

West End Citizens List Needs for CWA

President Is Expected to Defend Gold Plan Here Wednesday.

peak reached the day before Thanksgiving. This is beyond the point at which some adviseres expected the President to halt. It has, therefore, raised the question of whether he means to go on to the outside limit of his present authority (under the Thomas amendment) to double the statutory price of $20.67 an ounce. The top price, under this authority to reduce the gold content of the dollar thus would be $41.34 an ounce. The Committee for the Nation has urged going to this maximum.

Foreign Purchases Secret.

Chairman Jones announced yesterday that, so far, 308,000 ounces of domestic gold have been acquired for $10,200,000. He would not say how much foreign gold also has been bought. Secrecy still completely shrouds that end of the program.

Jones also fired back at the critics who complain that uncertainty over the dollar's future value is holding up the recovery parade.

"I think bankers really are anxious to loan their money," he was quoted by the Associated Press as saying. "I do not think the fear of inflation is causing them to hold back. The individual banker might feel that he is not making loans because of the uncertainty, but I do not think that if it comes to passing on loans he would turn down a good one. The uncertainty over the monetary policy of the Government is not, I believe, retarding business enough that you can tell it."

Roosevelt Holds Back.

Save for his allusions to "modern Tories" and joking commentaries at Warm Springs, Mr. Roosevelt has been silent in the face of the growing storm over where his policy is leading. A few of his intimates think he prefers to let the critics go on record so that he may then charge them with conjuring up evils which he plans to avoid. They also think he should show the country that the monetary policy is but an integral part of a large program which includes public works and other measures advocated by some of the critics.

As the possibilities in the monetary program are infinite and no final decisions apparently have been taken, none of the Presidential advisers now here will venture to predict what steps are to follow. They think the gold buying will continue for some time until Mr. Roosevelt is satisfied it has been given a thorough test as one means of keeping prices up, if not of regulating them as the commodity dollar of Prof. Warren contemplates.

It has been emphasized by several close associates of the President that final decisions are impossible, until the price level is closer to the declared 1926 goal—unless that goal is to be abandoned. They think it politically impossible to stop short of the goal now. They argue, therefore, that the President must retain a free hand to keep forcing prices up, slowly but surely, and to prevent a relapse that would imperil the banks or otherwise unsettle conditions. They think the President could well make these matters clear to the public.

Would Cite Advances.

And in rounding out the program, they would cite the advances so far achieved all along the depression front. Three typical steps were cited yesterday: (1) The Federal Surplus Relief Corporation's announcement of plans to buy 10,000,000 tons of coal for distribution to the destitute—this being, like previous plans to purchase and distribute food and clothing, a combination of relief and absorption of surpluses; (2) announcement by the Civil Works Administration that 1,250,000 men were given work in the first week of this new relief venture; (3) announcement by the Public Works Administration that $26,543,000 more had been allocated for projects to provide 161,249 man-months of work, the total so far allocated being close to $3,000,000,000.

So far the President's intimates profess to be gratified by the support of the President's measures and to be unterrified by the attacks. They not only think the President can successfully picture some of the critics as alarmists, but they believe the political support behind him has gained as much from the present storm as it has lost. In any event, they look to him to fire back, to reveal his plans more clearly and even to confound the critics.

Westminster Prelate Ill.

London, Dec. 1 (AP).—Francis Cardinal Bourne, Archbishop of Westminster, was confined to his bed today, suffering a chill, and concern was expressed about his condition.

$26,543,053 Allotted To 71 Private Projects

The Public Works Administration yesterday allotted $26,543,053 of the $438,000,000 remaining of its original $3,300,000,000 fund, to 71 scattered non-Federal projects.

The largest allocation was $11,900,000 to the Delaware River Joint Commission of New Jersey and Pennsylvania for construction and equipment of a rapid transit shuttle line between Philadelphia and Camden, N. J.

Cotton Mills To Cut Month's Work 25 Pct.

General Johnson Approves Reduction Being Made by Amending Code.

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, said tonight that Gen. Hugh S. Johnson has approved a recommendation of the cotton textiles industry code authority to cut production 25 per cent in December.

"Resolved, That pursuant to the provisions of section 6 of the cotton textile code, it is recommended to meet emergency conditions now prevailing in the industry, and to preserve an equitable sharing of present inequitable business and employment among concerns engaged in the industry, and the communities and employes depending on its activities, that during the month of December, 1933, productive machinery in the cotton textile industry shall not be operated for more than 75 per cent of the hours otherwise permitted by the cotton textile code."

The recommendation has the same force as any provision in the code. Sloan said it would apply to all units operating under the code, including cotton manufacturers, rayon weavers, mercerizing plants, finishing plants and thread manufacturers.

Cannon Argument Begins Next Week

U. S. Brief Denies Claim of Indicted Bishop.

Solicitor General Biggs filed in the Supreme Court yesterday a reply to the claim of Bishop James Cannon, jr., and his secretary, Ada L. Burroughs, that the corrupt practices act is unconstitutional, the Associated Press reports.

The two were indicted for failure to report contributions alleged to have been received from E. C. Jameson, to use against Alfred E. Smith in 1928. Oral argument in the case will be heard before the Supreme Court next week.

The Government in its brief asserted the Constitution empowers Congress to require treasurers of political committees to file statements of contributions made to them for the purpose of influencing the selection of Presidential electors.

Mellon, Phone Codes May Fix Only Hours, Pay

(Associated Press.)

Two big American industries dominated by single interests may be given NRA codes limited to mere regulation of hours and wages, with no provision for control of business practices.

Hugh S. Johnson, the Recovery Administrator, said at a press conference yesterday he would if necessary "impose" labor regulation to the Telephone industry, controlled almost entirely by the Bell System under the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., and on the aluminum business, which is 98 per cent in the hands of the Aluminum Company of America, dominated by the Mellon family.

Aluminum Clause Rejected.

The aluminum company has been refusing to accept code clauses drafted by independent companies that would destroy the advantage given it by control of virtually the entire supply of virgin aluminum in this country.

The A. T. & T., Gen. Johnson said, "didn't want to come in" because of its non-competitive character. In reply to a letter written him by Walter S. Gifford, president of the company, Gen. Johnson said he would insist on a code for labor provisions.

Mr. Gifford in New York issued a statement saying the question was not whether the company should cooperate with NRA but merely the method by which it would do so.

Code Need Protested.

The Gifford letter was said to have contained three points: That the A. T. & T., was noncompetitive; that it is already subject to so many governmental regulating agencies that it did not require a fair practice code; that the 6,000 or more independent telephone companies might be driven out of business if they had to live up to A. T. & T. wage levels and that his company did not wish to be associated in the public mind with this destruction.

There were indications that NRA might deal with the last problem in the same manner it finally handled business establishments of small towns by setting up a blanket exemption for all units with less than five employes.

Exemption of cooperative telephone exchanges and lines serving rural districts from having to pay as high wages as those of the bigger system was also suggested as a possibility.

2 Gas Station Managers Lose $48 to Holdup

Two gas station managers were held up and robbed last night of sums totaling $48.

Fine Day, Tunney Comments On Snub by Social Register

Lindbergh One of Few to Stay After Listing by Marriage.

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—Gene Tunney, retired king of fistiana, chuckled today when the 1934 Social Register showed he still was in retirement from the who's who of the bluebloods.

The former heavyweight champion got his name in the Register when he married Polly Lauder. But he was not listed last year and the latest edition skipped his name again.

If either party in a prominent marriage is listed in the book at the time of the marriage, it is customary for the book to publish both parties' names in its next edition. After that, a decision is made on whether the names shall remain in subsequent years.

Prince Alexis Listed.

Hence, Prince Alexis Mdivani of Georgia is listed in the 1934 book because of his marriage to Barbara Hutton.

Col. Charles Lindbergh, who "made" the Register when he married Anne Morrow, is one of the few persons who entered the book by marriage and stayed there.

Tunney flatly refused to discuss the matter.

"I think the weather is fine," he said. Then he laughed when asked directly to comment on his retirement from the register.

The Social Register's office also declined.

It's Just Not Discussed.

"How can a prominent person whose name has been dropped get back in the publication?"

"I'm so sorry," the Register's spokesman answered, "but those things never are discussed. It is just something one doesn't do."

Tunney, whose fists took him to prominence, was not alone on the retirement list.

La Guardia Indorsed As Fusion President

Claiming the two major political parties of the Nation are in a somewhat artificial condition, Dr. Arthur MacDonald, a Washington member of the District Medical Society and a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, announced yesterday that he was advocating Fiorello LaGuardi, Mayor-elect of New York, as fusion President of the United States in 1936.

Parisian Police Await 150 Hunger Marchers

Paris, Dec. 1 (AP).—A heavy force of gendarmes and Paris police were prepared tonight to prevent trouble when the main body of 150 unemployed hunger marchers reaches the outskirts of the city.

The delegation, expected to arrive tomorrow, planned to send a corps of 20 to present officially their "work and bread" demands to Parliament. The group will be dispatched from suburban St. Denis, where the marchers were to encamp.

"Money Truce" Affords Laugh For Roosevelt

Smiles Away Rumors and Joins "Neighbors" in Raising Flag.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Warm Springs, Ga., Dec. 1.—Nearing the end of his Thanksgiving vacation, President Roosevelt devoted today to affairs of the Warm Springs Foundation and its neighboring small town.

The only question of National import that reached him—a report that the Bank of England had agreed to a currency truce—was laughed away good naturedly. In similar fashion he has dismissed a flood of such inquiries reaching this resort.

Hundreds of "neighbors"—as he likes to call them—gathered at Warm Springs to see him at flag-raising exercises this afternoon. Accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt, in his familiar small open car, he turned a tanned and merry face in greeting and waved a worn hat.

Watches Flag Raised.

Stopping the automobile at the shiny new flag pole in the center of town, Mr. Roosevelt pulled himself to the back of the front seat and watched the flag he gave the village rise slowly up the pole. Mayor Sam P. Killian expressed Warm Springs' appreciation and then the President made a short, informal talk praising the townspeople.

"I think the Roosevelt family, as long as we live," he told them, "should provide a flag for this pole, and as long as I live I am going to see that we do it."

The crowd, estimated at 1,000, was several times as large as the population of Warm Springs. Earlier in the afternoon Mrs. Roosevelt addressed several hundred club women gathered in a nearby grove, urging women's clubs to select suitable and useful projects for women under the Civil Works Administration.

The President drove his car between a block of cheering Georgians held back by a C. C. C. guard of honor, whose members, incidentally, had hewn the flag pole from a native pine, and friends noted that he appeared in most robust health since his visit here.

Laughs Away Report.

At the exercises newspapermen showed him a telegram conveying the report that a plan for a currency agreement with the Bank of England had been sent here. As the President broke into a laugh his secretary, Marvin H. McIntyre, commented, "just another report."

The President then turned his keen interest in the foundation he organized for the crippled to a meeting of its board of trustees, which he heads. Two new members were elected—Cason J. Callaway, of LaGrange, and Cator Woolford, of Atlanta, Ga. The trustees, all intimate friends, gathered at the Little White House.

Announcement was made that the commission of Robert Lincoln O'Brien as chairman of the United States Tariff Commission had been extended by the President another year. His commission as chairman expired today, although not his tenure on the board.

Only two more days remain before Mr. Roosevelt will turn again to Washington to the work from which he sought relief here.

Dollar Termed Envy of Nations

Cleveland, Dec. 1 (AP).—An opinion that Americans do not realize that their dollar is inherently the most attractively priced currency in the world was expressed tonight by Dr. Max Winkler, president of the American Council of Foreign Bondholders, Inc., addressing the Bond Club, composed of Cleveland bankers and business men.

"Few nations are in as enviable a position as the United States in regard to currency," he declared. "Our dollar is backed by a reserve more adequate than that of most nations. We enjoy a favorable trade balance and have no foreign debt."

Dr. Winkler said there are $13 of resources for every dollar the United States owes, while Great Britain owes $36.05 for every $100 of assets, and France's debt is substantially more than one-third of that nation's resources.

11 Professors Ask Immediate Return to Gold

Swarthmore Educators Warn Against Drift to Inflation.

Swarthmore, Pa., Dec. 1 (AP). With a warning that President Roosevelt's monetary policy is moving toward inflation of "alarming proportions," 11 social science professors of Swarthmore College urge immediate return to the gold standard "although not necessarily with a dollar of the former gold content."

In a statement, which they asserted was not "issued on behalf of Wall street, but on behalf of the small income receivers," the professors said the present monetary policy of the National Administration will discredit its other programs.

Slight Thus Far.

"We believe in many of the policies of the Government, both economic and noneconomic," the statement said. "We approve of many of the ends sought by advocates of the monetary policy. We recognize that there are many degrees of 'inflation' and that as yet the Government may be said to have inflated to a relatively slight degree.

"But we are convinced that the Government policy is moving rapidly in the direction of an inflation of alarming proportions. This statement can only suggest the basis of our protest.

"The chief danger of present developments, however, is that they point toward too much spending of a highly dangerous sort.

Impaired Credit Feared.

"People who get a dollar may come to feel they must spend it immediately, for fear it will be worth less tomorrow. Government borrowing from the banks for the sake of public expenditures or for the sake of temporarily financing private groups may become so large as to impair Federal credit and commercial bank safety far into the future."

Sponsors of the statement are Profs. Herbert F Fraser, Clair Wilcox and Patrick Murphy Malin, of the Department of Economics; J. Ronald Pennock, Frances L. Reinhold and Harold E. B. Speight, Department of Political Science; Troyer S. Anderson, Department of History; Brand Blanshard, John W. Nason and Frances Blanshard, Department of Philosophy, and Robert B. West Declared For Inflation

25 Congressmen Backing Roosevelt Plan, Nevada Legislator Says.

(Associated Press.)

Representative Scrugham (Democrat) of Nevada, said yesterday a poll of Western congressmen had brought 25 indorsements "of the policy of the President especially as to inflation and recommending the immediate inclusion of silver as an addition to the monetary basis."

He said the primary object of the poll was to demonstrate that despite public criticism, the President's monetary policies would find strong support in the next Congress. Scrugham added the poll also showed strong support for silver as a monetary base.

He said he had reason to believe the President's plan included a linking of silver with gold in some manner.

Speaker Rainey said he had seen the results of Scrugham's poll and wished to add his approval.

Gold Foes' Candor Pleases Rankin

Glad Smith and Others Are Out in Open.

Representative Rankin, one of the Congressional advocates of currency expansion, expressed the belief to the Associated Press yesterday that Alfred E. Smith and other critics of the Administration's monetary policy will do President Roosevelt "less harm" since they "have come out in the open."

Rankin said he was supporting the President in his effort to readjust the dollar's gold content, adding:

"It is our only hope for a restoration of the farmer's purchasing power by raising the prices of farm commodities back to their normal values, and until the farmer's purchasing power is restored there can be no recovery."

Liner Brings in Wine Cargo and Two Camels

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—The Hamburg American liner Albert Ballin, docking today from Cherbourg, brought 1,500 cases of Rhine wine and, of all things, two camels.

Also in the hold were 1,000 cases of musical instruments and toys, 8,000 canaries, and 2,000 live fish.

90 Trapped 2 Months in Ice Saved as Mild Winds Blow

Moscow, Dec. 1 (AP).—Ninety men and women, trapped for two months aboard the Soviet icebreaker Cheliuskin, welcomed mild winds tonight as a powerful ally in what they were ready to call a lost battle against ice in the East Siberian Sea.

After weeks of privation and cold and an unending view of crushing, relentless ice floes that threatened often to break their little vessel they at last looked toward an early return to safety and civilization.

They had prepared to abandon their endangered refuge at 67 north latitude, 172 west longitude, and had started to put their meager stores on the ice, ready to flee into other dangers, when favorable winds came to their rescue.

The Cheliuskin sent a message to the Northern Sea Route Administration late today saying the ice was beginning to break up, that steam was being generated and the vessel was "preparing to move."

Mrs. Roosevelt Requests Jobs To Aid Women

Urges Clubs to Support Movement in Talk at Warm Springs.

Warm Springs, Ga., Dec. 1 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt in a speech here today called on club women and others able to do so to lend a hand in finding work for the unemployed of their sex.

Speaking before 3,000 persons assembled in a wood near Warm Springs Foundation, where President Roosevelt is spending a vacation, Mrs. Roosevelt explained the operations of the Civil Works Service program under which it is hoped to obtain jobs for more unemployed women.

With this program getting under way, she urged club women to "get behind" those in charge in the communities involved in an effort to create jobs. She predicted the next month or six weeks would see much done toward taking care of the problem of unemployed women, adding:

"I want to congratulate the club women for the work they have been able to do to help the recovery which I think we are beginning to see everywhere. The women have followed a program that has been very helpful to all the Administration."

She listed sewing rooms, playground and recreation work, work in institutions and similar projects as means of providing jobs for women.

Ballot on Cuban Peace Plan Rushed

Havana, Dec. 1 (AP).—With the fate of Cuba's "formula for cordiality" in doubt leaders of the A B C tonight were speeding up the referendum among members of the organization which will determine whether the group will support the plan.

Fernandez Medina, Uruguayan Minister, sponsor of the plan for political tranquility, was optimistic and predicted the final vote of the A B C would show the rank and file ready to accept his formula.

On the other hand, almost every other political leader believed the A B C would reject the plan and all agreed that rejection by the organization would mean failure for Medina's efforts.

Hitler Tightens Grip on Nation; Names 2 Aids

Makes Trusted Nazis, Hess and Roehm, Ministers Without Portfolio.

Berlin, Dec. 1 (AP).—Chancellor Hitler took another long step to clinch his power over Germany today by including two of his most trusted coworkers, Rudolph Hess and Capt. Ernest Roehm, in the national cabinet as ministers without portfolios.

Hess, who throughout Hitler's struggle for power was his personal friend and confidant, has since April 27 been in charge of the next party's political organization as vice leader, or representative of Hitler with full powers.

Since December, 1930, Capt. Roehm has been in charge of the chancellor's 3,000,000 uniformed party soldiers, the Brown, Black and Gray Shirts, who are likely soon to wear the brown Nazi uniform.

Another step toward the Nazi ideal of completeness, was taken with the dissolution of employers' federations and the explanation that in the future their problems will be met "according to Hitlerite conceptions."

Simultaneously an official newspaper hinted that labor registration offices will be established to control completely the German labor camps.

A cabinet decision has been announced to erect a separate system of justice for the Nazis.

Laws will be enforced much more strictly in the case of the Hitler followers than for non-Nazis, because the chancellor holds that membership in the Nazi party is an honor which entails special obligations.

The Nazi, he maintains, must represent the elite of the German people.

Germany will have three court systems—for ordinary citizens, the military, and Nazis.

U. S. Accepts Ford Bid on 700 Trucks

$567 per unit on an indefinite number of four-cylinder Ford trucks for the Department of Agriculture on October 21.

Acceptance was held up twice, first when Gen. Johnson maintained the Government should not purchase Ford equipment while the manufacturer was not flying the Blue Eagle, and again when the recovery administrator held Sabine's low bids were contrary to NRA provisions because they were below cost.

Ford himself was not directly involved in the dispute, but the final decision was regarded as higly important to him in his controversy with Gen. Johnson.

Comptroller General McCarl answered the first of Gen. Johnson's objections by ruling that Ford dealers were eligible to bid on Government contracts. Later the Comptroller General ruled that bids below list price, or cost, could be submitted on Government contracts without violation of the recovery act.

Sabine Fights Transfer.

Meanwhile, however, the CCC was badly in need of 700 trucks, and it was decided to have the War Department open bids on that number.

Sabine fought the transfer tooth and nail, charging Administration "trickery" and bombarding the Comptroller General, Secretary of War Dern, Secretary Wallace and finally President Roosevelt himself, with strenuous protests.

The War Department opened bids for 6-cylinder trucks for the CCC and as the Ford company does not manufacture this grade, Sabine was forced to bid on 8-cylinder trucks. As a result, the Chevrolet Motor Co. was low bidder, although Sabine vigorously maintained that at the comparative bids the Government would lose money by not buying Ford equpiment.

Last night's decision, which came as a surprise to Sabine, no hint having been given of anything of the sort during the day, removes the purchase of the 700 CCC trucks from the Army's jurisdiction and returns it to the Department of Agriculture, which will buy four-cylinder trucks from Sabine's company.

In a brief statement commenting upon Secretary Wallace's announcement, Sabine said:

"I am very much pleased that the Government has made this award in the line with good business practice, and I consider it fair in every respect."

Other Low Bids Entered.

While no mention was made last night of other pending contracts for motorized equipment, on which Sabine has entered low bids, the dealer said he felt sure the decision of the Department of Agriculture constituted a precedent.

He said he had low bids entered on trucks and automobiles for the Commerce, Interior, Treasury, Agriculture, War and Navy Departments and the Records Bureau. The amount involved in some 2,300 units was approximately $1,500,000.

Sabine estimated the delay since the controversy over Ford's compliance with the NRA arose had cost the Government and various States which had been awaiting establishment of a precedent $10,000,000.

It is believed the Agriculture Department's decision to accept Sabine's bid will be followed by a general buying of Ford trucks and automobiles by agencies which have been waiting for a lead.

Hitler Neutral In Protestant Church Dispute

Solution of Differences Entirely in Hands of Bishop Mueller.

Berlin, Dec. 1 (AP).—Chancellor Adolf Hitler publicly committed himself for the first time tonight regarding a bitter controversy in the Protestant church, and issued a statement that neither the national government nor the individual state governments must interfere in the fight.

Thus the chancellor expressed once more his confidence in Reichbishop Ludwig Mueller, since he left the solution of the conflict solely in Mueller's hands.

The chancellor called the differences over dogma and leadership a "purely church matter" and forbade any "interference from the outside in this fight of divergent opinions."

Hitler stated flatly that even church bodies were not authorized "to induce the government departments to interfere."

Dr. Mueller meanwhile was working on the formation of a church cabinet aceptable to the warring factions.

New dissensions were said to be hopelessly dividing the Nazi German Christians.

The Rev. Joachim Hossenfelder, forced to resign recently from the Evangelical Church cabinet, drew the ire of church folk again today by announcing he would be inducted into office as Bishop of Brandenburg on December 13 by Reichbishop Mueller.

Nazis List New State Enemies

Rich Publisher and Emil Ludwig, Author, Face Property Seizure.

Berlin, Dec. 1 (AP).—Secret Prussian police, engaged in a relentless pursuit of non-Nazis, published today a long list of "enemies of the state" in addition to Albert Einstein.

The famous scientist, whose bank account, negotiable instruments, and other belongings were declared the property of the state of Prussia November 20, is now in Princeton, N. J.

Today's list includes Rudolf Breitscheid, former parliamentary floor leader of the Social Democrats; his wife; the author, Emil Ludwig, and Wilhelm Muenzenberg, a millionaire Communist publisher.

Deposits of German peace societies as well as the postage stamps, the cash savings and bank deposits which belonged to the Republican Reichsbanner organization, also were confiscated.

Divorced Husband Slays Alleged Rival

Oklahoma City, Dec. 1 (AP).—Bert Yount, 27, an abstractor, was wounded fatally, allegedly by William R. Taggart, 30, an insurance man, in a shooting in the county clerk's office here today.

Taggart's wife divorced him Wednesday. Taggart accused Yount of causing the divorce, friends said.

New Nazi Oath

Soldiers No Longer Swear to Back Constitution.

Berlin, Dec. 1 (AP).—A new military oath "in harmony with the new state" was authorized tonight by the German cabinet.

It reads:

"I swear by God and this holy oath that I will loyally and honorably serve the people and the fatherland always and that as an obedient and courageous soldier I will be ready at all times to sacrifice my life for this oath."

A significant change is the elimination of a statement regarding allegiance to the constitution.

Scotch Send First Legal Rum to U. S.

hold its first meeting Monday, the day before the thirty-sixth State convention meets to ratify repeal of the eighteenth amendment, thus ending National prohibition.

Joseph H. Choate, jr., chairman of the F. A. C. A. told the Associated Press in New York that a policy of self-rule for the alcoholic beverage industries to the greatest extent possible would be followed. He said his administration would act only when the code authorities of the industries fail to function.

The FACA will have no authority over quotas for liquor importations until February 1. Until that time the fixing of quotas will be in the hands of the Secretaries of Agriculture and the Treasury, and their duty has been delegated to Dr. Doran and Mr. Miller.

The decision to permit the immediate entry of approximately 4,800,000 gallons of foreign alcoholic beverages was made after importers applied for permits to bring 12,000,000 gallons into the country. The 4,800,000-gallon quota was based on an average four months' importation of liquors and wines in the 1910-to-1914 period. Theoretically it represents a minimum four-month supply.

But importers will be able to bring in their full quota at once, and if this is sold they may apply for another allotment.

Plan Revision Later.

Later on it is the purpose of the Government to revise the temporary quotas now being set in order to favor those countries relaxing trade barriers against American exports. Conversations toward this end have been started with foreign diplomatic representatives, but no agreements have been adopted so far.

The Roosevelt Administration appears determined that if Great Britain wishes to sell large quantities of Scotch whisky and gin in this country she must, for instance, start buying American butter and hogs. If the French want to build a market here for their wines they must relax their restrictions against the importation of American apples, it was contended.

Allocation of the 4,800,000-gallon quota among types of beverages was not revealed. It was learned, however, that a temporary quota of 600,000 gallons of distilled spirits have been fixed for the United Kingdom. It was explained that the major part of this quota would be Scotch whisky, the remainder gin.

The United Kingdom quota does not include the Irish Free State, which did not exist in the prewar period. How the Free State's quota will be determined was not revealed. But it was known that the Irish would like to establish a market here for their whiskies and stand willing to go far in granting trade concessions to this country.

No Quota for Canada.

So far as could be learned no quota has been fixed for Canada, although it was explained that probably a large volume of aged Canadian rye whisky would be admitted outside the quota limits, for blending with domestic rye. For three years Canadian distillers, anticipating prohibition repeal, have been laying in whisky stocks until now they have available 40,000,000 gallons. A large part of this whisky is bourbon, made particularly for the American market.

Latin-American countries, chiefly Chile and Argentina, which exported an inconsequential amount of wine to the United States in the prewar period, are now clamoring for sizable quotas. Whether they will be given an allocation under the temporary quota or will have to wait the negotiation of trade agreements was not known.

These factors made more difficult the work of Dr. Doran and Mr. Miller last night. Another troublesome factor was the flood of applications for quotas from persons claiming a desire to enter the importing business. Although some of these applicants are expected to be unable to finance themselves, they will be given quotas. If they do not use them, it is understood they will be reallocated among established importing firms.

Dr. Doran yesterday informally authorized the Scotch whisky importers wishing to load cases aboard the Cameronia to go ahead, although he did not issue them any permits. Under the regulations the liner can not leave Glasgow with the liquor aboard until the American consul at Glasgow approves the liquor invoices. The permits will be issued and the consul instructed to clear the shipment by the time the liner is ready to sail today, it was understood.

District Among States Barring Ads for Liquor

Status After December 5 Told by Post Office Department.

The District of Columbia, Virginia and West Virginia were listed yesterday by Acting Postmaster General O'Mahoney among the States and Territories which prohibit both advertising and solicitation of orders for intoxicating liquors on and after December 5.

Complying with provisions of the Reed amendment, the Postoffice Department issued Liquor Bulletin No. 3, listing States and Territories affected by the act of March 3, 1917, which forbids the mailing of such advertisements or solicitations.

Delaware, the bulletin says, prohibits liquor advertisements except in newspapers and other periodical publications or by radio.

Maryland is among the States having statutes which provide for local option. Mailers are warned by the Acting Postmaster General to ascertain from officers of the State the particular communities in which it is unlawful to advertise or solicit orders for liquor.

States and territories prohibiting both advertising and solicitation are: Alabama, Alaska, District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Maine, Michigan, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Puerto Rico, South Carolina, Texas, Virgin Islands, Virginia and West Virginia.

Missouri, South Dakota and Utah prohibit advertising, but not solicitation. Arkansas, Minnesota, New Hampshire, Tennessee and Vermont prohibit solicitation but not advertising. Connecticut prohibits solicitation in towns forbidding the sale of liquor under local option. Indiana permits solicitation or orders by holders of permits issued by the State excise department.

In addition to Maryland, New Mexico and Washington have statutes which provide for local option.

$1.10 Rum Tax Passes Senate In Maryland

Both Houses Rush Debate, Fear Legal Alcohol Without Law Tuesday.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 2.—An excise tax of $1.10 a gallon on liquor and strong wines was approved early today by the State Senate.

After a debate the Senate rejected by 15 to 7 an amendment by Senator J. Allan Coad, St. Marys County, calling for substitution of a 10-cent-a-gallon distillers' tax for the $1.10 levy, sponsored by Gov. Ritchie.

Final passage of the administration control plan probably will be voted shortly by the Senate. The measure has not been reported out by a House committee.

Observers believe legislative action will not be completed in time for the measure to become effective with repeal of National prohibition Tuesday. There may be an interval of several days during which wet jurisdictions will permit sale and dry sections will ban dealers from displaying liquor wares.

May Bar Foreign Liquor.

Senator Coad fought the $1.10 provision on the grounds that such a levey would make the price of whisky prohibitive and cause bootleggers to thrive. He termed the tax unfair and unjust.

The St. Marys senator contended the administration proposal to limit sale of liquor to Maryland distilled goods was "just another example of the governor's efforts to exceed his authority. Now that he has usurped the power of the courts by sending troops to the Eastern Shore, he seeks to jam this legislation down our throats."

A vote remained to be taken on the proposal to ban whisky from outside the State.

Prior to the Senate vote demands for sale of liquor by the drink in hotels, clubs and restaurants of Prince Georges County were placed before the county delegation.

Auto Drinking Held Peril.

A group of 25 residents of Prince Georges County joined in criticizing a proposal previously agreed on by the delegation, calling for sale of liquor and fortified wines by the bottle only and for consumption off the premises. One of the chief arguments presented against the original package plan was that whisky dealers in the county would be unable to compete with Washington hotels and restaurants.

Robert W. McCullough, Democratic leader of Bladensburg, testified the original package plan would tend to kill beer sales and encourage boisterous conduct by liquor drinkers in automobiles parked in streets.

Sale by the drink was recommended by J. Wilson Ryon, former Prince Georges State's attorney, as likely to improve employment conditions.

Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, delegation chairman, announced another hearing would be granted to the Hyattsville Chamber of Commerce Monday.

A hearing on the Montgomery County control plan was announced for Monday.

A bill to legalize Sunday movies and amateur sports in Montgomery County was granted emergency status in order that it might become effective when passed and signed by the governor.

A hearing will be given all interested parties by the Prince Georges County delegation of the House of Delegates on the proposed county liquor bill tonight at 8 o'clock in the Statehouse at Annapolis.

Joint Hearings On Liquor Tax Start Dec. 11

House and Senate Groups Take Steps to Hasten Congress Action.

Joint hearings on tax features of the Administration's proposed liquor control bill yesterday were called for December 11 by the House Ways and Means and the Senate Finance Committees.

Looking to immediate action when Congress meets January 3, Senator Pat Harrison, chairman of the Senate committee, and Representative Robert L. Doughton, head of the House group, hit on this means of expediting Congressional agreement.

Meantime, the full House Ways and Means Committee will meet at the Capitol Monday to receive the special tax report of a subcommittee headed by Representative Samuel B. Hill (Democrat), Washington.

Tax Issue Untouched.

The Hill report will incorporate no liquor tax recommendations, it was learned last night. The subcommittee plans to hold a preliminary meeting before the full committee session, when finishing touches will be placed on its report, recommending tightening of the administrative features of the income-tax laws to the extent of some $300,000,000 to $400,000,000 annually.

Liquor tax studies for the time being have been left entirely in the hands of the President's Interdepartmental Committee. Neither that committee, nor Treasury experts working in conjunction with Prof. Roswell Magill, the Treasury's new tax adviser, will be ready to make recommendations Monday, it is understood.

Senator Harrison and Representative Doughton, who were out of the city yesterday, are expected back tonight or tomorrow. At the Senate Finance Committee room it was said the joint hearings will be brief, possibly covering only three or four days.

Final Action Delayed.

Although proposals slightly to scale down the Federal tax on small-earned incomes, and moderately increase the tax on incomes in the higher brackets, were discussed by the Hill subcommittee, no agreement was reached, a member of the subcommittee said last night.

Their report will recommend elimination of tax exemption now granted corporate capital adjustments, propose limitation of capital gains, cut down the number of deduction items, and possibly abolish consolidated income tax returns.

From these items Representative Hill hopes to save upward of $400,000,000. He hopes $500,000,000 can be realized from the new prohibition repeal revenues.

London, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—There is a possibility that the Irish Free State will be severed from the British Empire as a result of a communication to the British government from President Eamon De Valera, it was understood tonight. The situation was regarded as unusually critical.

Previous Merits to Release Dry Law Violators From Jails

Procedure for Release of Offenders Not Told by Cummings.

What to do with the thousands of "prohibition prisoners"—men and women jailed for dry violations—when repeal has outlawed the eighteenth amendment, is provoking thought at the Department of Justice.

No blanket policy has been laid down, although Attorney General Cummings has announced that merits of each case will have much to do with its determination.

No immediate estimate is available of the number of men and women serving sentences for selling or transporting anything from a pint of "high moon" to a truckload of beer during the last year. It is conservatively figured, however, that several thousand persons must be confined throughout the country for prohibition violations.

Whether, after repeal, these prisoners should be released, is a question which must be answered. In the excitement of approaching repeal, little thought has been given to these persons, but attention is bound to be called to their plight.

There is a possibility that President Roosevelt will be called upon to issue wholesale pardons. There also is the possibility the Federal Board of Parole will be asked to release many offenders.

Mr. Cummings said yesterday he was not considering any blanket policy, but each case would be considered on its merits. Where a prisoner's previous record has been good and the prisoner otherwise led a normal, useful life, it was his intention to be lenient, he added.

This was interpreted in high quarters to mean prisoners with good records would be freed. What procedure is to be followed in giving them their freedom was not stated, however.

The customary method of pardoning a prisoner is for the Attorney General to make recommendation to the President, who issues the pardon. Paroles, however, are in the hands of the parole board.

Hull Hits Red Tape, Asks Acts

Opposes Formality in Calls on Ministers; Seeks Peace in Chaco.

Montevideo, Uruguay, Dec. 1 (AP). Secretary of State Cordell Hull took up the problems of economic depression, peace and red tape today in a series of informal visits with foreign ministers als ohere for the forthcoming Pan-American conference.

He called on them unannounced and in street clothes, urging them to dispense with formalities and to act like one large family, with one mind and purpose.

Referring to the war between Bolivia and Paraguay, he discussed the possibilities of some "suitable peace utterance" on behalf of the conference.

Mr. Hull urged the foreign ministers to disregard minor matters in order to take up the major problems of raising the prices of domestic commodities and exports.

Christmas Cash Release Pushed

Jones Says R.F.C. Seeks to Free Deposits for Holiday Buying.

Chairman Jones yesterday said the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is endeavoring to get all the money possible out of closed banks by Christmas and to this end is seeking cooperation of State officials and receivers, according to the Associated Press. He added:

"Where we have the cooperation of all hands, the work is going along well. We think it would be nice if we could release as much money as possible to depositors before Christmas.

"Business generally, as far as I gather from all over the country, is improving.

"I have been unable to find any complaint, except possibly from some high hat individuals who have plenty of money and do not like the Government's monetary policy.

"Business men generally are happy because business has picked up at all."

Wynekoop Son Sobered by 2 Court Defeats

Jocular Attitude Fades as Attempts to Win Freedom Lose.

Chicago, Dec. 1 (AP).—Bereft of his air of jocular self-assurance, Earle Wynekoop, accused with his mother, Dr. Alice Wynekoop, in the death of his wife, Rheta, today was haled into two courts and in each saw his lawyers lose their battles in his behalf.

In the felony court of Judge Jay A. Schiller, Prosecutor Charles S. Dougherty obtained a continuance until December 12 for arraignment on the warrant charging Earle with being an accessory before the fact of the murder.

Immediately afterward the scene was changed to the criminal courtroom of Judge Joseph B. David, where a hearing on a petition for a writ of habeas corpus was continued until December 11.

When the habeas corpus hearing for Dr. Alice Wynekoop was called, Judge David announced that he had been informed the elderly physician was too ill to be moved from her cot in the county jail infirmary. The judge ruled her presence was not necessary.

Frank Tyrrell, defense attorney, said a defense fund was being collected for Dr. Wynekoop.

Walter Wynekoop, another son, said that friends of his mother from all parts of the country had announced they would take part in raising the defense fund. He would not say how much already had been received, but elsewhere it was reported to have exceeded $25,000.

Austria Penitent In German Killing

Berlin, Dec. 1 (AP).—An apology by the Austrian government for the killing of a German soldier near the frontier November 24 was officially announced today.

The secretary of the Austrian chancellory in Berlin expressed his regrets and assured the government the responsible persons would be brought to a speedy justice.

The soldier was a member of a skiing party, dressed in civilian clothes, and allegedly was killed by Austrians who fired from across the border near Hindenburg Hutte.

The authority said about 1,700 men were at work.

Col. Roosevelt Calls Inflation U. S. Calamity

Legal Confiscation of Savings Foreseen as Outcome.

savings, for they are used by the average man as a means of assuring the future of his wife and children should anything happen to him. The majority of widows in this country are living on the life insurances of their husbands. If currency were debased 90 per cent, one-half of the value of their policies would be confiscated."

"Profit for Debtors."

Col. Roosevelt said "still other effects of inflation" would "profit every one who owes America."

"This country," he said, "for the last ten years has refused sturdily to cancel the debts owed by European nations. Inflation automatically cancels those debts to the extent which it depreciates the currency."

Col. Roosevelt said "no fallacy is more persistent than inflation."

"In spite of this," he said, "people still cling with a fatal fascination to this doctrine. Now, in our generation, we are faced with the same problem. The same outworn fallacies are being voiced by the same theorists and a large group of people have been deceived. They are shouting that those who believe in sound money are controlled by Wall street.

"The American Federation of Labor and the American Legion are opposing inflation. No one has ever accused them of being Wall street. The men who make this accusation are either knaves or fools."

"Remedy Only Temporary."

The son of the late President compared inflation with the use of drugs.

"Like drugs," he said, "each fresh expansion of the currency brings to the country an ephemeral feeling of well-being, soon over and leaving as its aftermath a reaction which makes the people demand a further step.

"Inflation destroys the well-being of all elements with the exception of corrupt and cunning speculators who feed like vultures on the rotten corpse of prosperity. The people who suffer are the average men and women of the community. The plain facts of the matter are this: By debasing the currency, you do not create wealth. At the most, you transfer it from one person to another."

It makes no difference, the colonel said, how inflation is accomplished since "the result is the same."

"Each time its advocates promise a great recrudescense of business, rising prices and wages. As a matter of fact, the logic of the situation is inevitable. Wages and salaries always lag behind costs of products, so labor and white-collar classes suffer.

Exodus of Cash Cited.

"On the threat of a currency being inflated, or debased, every one who can very naturally converts his cash into some tangible possession, or puts it outside the country in the currency or securities of some other nation. Evidently, therefore, commodities and equities tend to be marked up, though even the marking-up does not equal the former value in unbased currency. This period of marking-up gives a fictitious flare to business, acting as drugs would upon a person.

"Increased purchasing power, however, is not generated, and, therefore, stagnation ensues, just as a let down comes to a man after the effects of drugs have worn off. The effect of this is inevitable. A cry arises from the country for still further inflation, just as a man wants more drugs. The result is that the process is repeated and goes on until absolute ruin results."

Col. Roosevelt said he believed "controlled inflation is almost impossible. The jar coincident to stabilization has much the same unpleasant effects as sobering up has on a man who has taken drugs. Prices halt, or recede. Business is dislocated, suffering is intense and the pressure becomes terrific to renew the process of inflation."

Lynchings Denounced.

Col. Roosevelt digressed from his speech to denounce lynchings as a "burning disgrace." He said:

"I believe in crime being punished. I believe we have gone too far in coddling criminals. I believe some offenses should be penalized by capital punishment, but it is a burning disgrace to see lynchings that have been taking place.

"If we don't like a law, we have the machinery to change that law, but there can be no excuse for an American citizen going out and perpetrating that kind of thing."

Commission Calls Blue Law Hearing

Opponents of 2 P. M. Sunday Closing to Be Heard.

Demand for elimination of regulations requiring amusement places in the District to remain closed until 2 p. m. on Sunday will be heard by the District Commissioners at 3 p. m. Tuesday.

Consideration was asked by the Association Opposed to Blue Laws. Daniel E. Garges, secretary to the Commissioners, fixed the hour between hearings for delegations of the Federation of Civic Associations and the Federation of Citizens Associations.

The former want to discuss with the Commissioners employment under the Civil Works Administration. The latter have no specific question to discuss, they said.

Supervising Embassy Redecoration

Underwood & Underwood.

Eugene Schoen, New York architect, a leading proponent of the modern school of interior decorating, examines with his son, Lee (left), one of the great staircases of the Russian Embassy which the Soviet government has commissioned him to redecorate, retaining as much as possible its original design for economy's sake.

Noted Architect Engaged, But Orders Say Simply "Make It Habitable."

Economy has overcome the artistic preferences of the Soviet government and its architect in the matter of redecorating the Russian Embassy.

When word got around yesterday that Eugene Schoen, New York architect, had been designated to direct the work of refitting the embassy, Washingtonians who know Mr. Schoen and who understand the precedent the Soviet has set in embassy decoration in other countries envisioned an example of modern home furnishing unexcelled in the land.

Mr. Schoen designed the interiors of the Roxy Theater in New York and executed the photo-murals in the New York exhibit at the Century of Progress. And in each case that the Soviet has built a new embassy the interior has been done in the impressionistic manner of Mr. Schoen and his contemporaries.

"Make It Habitable."

But this time the Soviet has no money to spend that way. It has commissioned Mr. Schoen merely to make the home of former czarist embassadors habitable for the official representative, Alexander Troyanovsky.

At that, it will be required to spend $100,000. The walls and floors of the old embassy are covered with dirt a half inch thick. The heating plant will have to be replaced with modern oil burning equipment. Laundry facilities are antiquated and useless. The kitchen must be moderized. And the baths; high-sided tubs and spreading washstands in wind-swept areas. These must be replaced with showers in cosier, tiled surroundings.

For the most part Mr. Schoen's job falls under the head of reconditioning. Sweeping staircases with gilded iron railings, Ionic columns and wide open spaces of the one-time home of a nineteenth century American sleeping car manufacturer will stay, though Mr. Schoen would like very much to do a piece of work less likely to affront twentieth century esthetic senses.

No Double Eagles.

"Sometimes a good architect is one who leaves things very much as he finds them," Mr. Schoen explained. "This is a splendid example of a transitional style, something between Louis VI and Louis XV. For the thing it imitates it is very fine.

"To make a complete modern job of it we should have to glut the whole place. That would be vandalism. We'll do no more than make it habitable, being very careful that we leave no double eagles about and, possibly, to put here and there a sickle and a hammer.

Louisiana Vote Quiz Hearings Ended Today

Committee Will Return to Washington and Make Report.

New Orleans, Dec. 1 (AP).—The New Orleans hearings of the Senate subcommittee investigating the election of Senator John H. Overton will be closed tomorrow and the committee will return to Washington to prepare a report for the full committee.

The full committee in turn will report to the Senate at the January session. Chairman Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, explained the closing of the two weeks' hearing here did not mean the end of the investigation, but the subcommittee was powerless to act further until a report is made.

Publisher Testifies.

Col. James M. Thomson, publisher of the New Orleans Item and the Tribune, today testified he was charged with the responsibility of raising funds for the deficit from the campaign of President Franklin D. Roosevelt and that no part of these funds was used for the Overton campaign.

He said he collected $39,831 from approximately 30,000 persons and that names of all contributors with their amounts were published in his newspapers.

Col. Thomson precipitated some old-time Democratic oratory when he said in answer to a question that he "did not like to make a stump speech in this stand."

Thomas Starts Speeches.

"It already has been done," said Senator Elbert Thomas (Democrat), Utah.

Rising Senator Connally said.

"My State of Texas gave the Democratic party the greatest majority of any State in the Union, and more money than any State except New Orleans."

Not to be outdone, Senator Overton arose:

"The State of Louisiana was the banner State of the whole Union. In proportion to population, it gave more Democratic votes than any State, even more than the State from which my distinguished friend comes."

Thomas Is Utah's Gift.

Being unable to stand more, Senator Thomas arose and said:

"If I stay here much longer, I will acquire the habits of you people and say that the sole contribution the State of Utah made to the Democratic party in 1932 was Then each senator bowed low to the election of this senator present." the other and went back to hearing testimony.

Huey Long Ballots Burned by Citizens

ministration had ordered should bear only the name of Mrs. Kemp. Senator Huey P. Long's pick for the Congress post, were seized and burned shortly after the West Feliciana Parish police jury had taken steps to prevent the parish from participating in Gov. O. K. Allen's suddenly called election Tuesday.

Ballot Boxes "Loaned."

The jurors, governing body of the parish, voted not to pay any officials who might serve in the election, "loaned" the parish's ballot boxes to the editor of the St. Francisville weekly newspaper "for an indefinite period," and called on Cheston Fowlkes, Long-appointed parish supervisor of elections, to resign.

Seven of the 12 parishes in the Sixth Congressional District have openly announced they will not pay any of Tuesday's election expense.

The burning of the ballots at St. Francisville gave the first confirmation to reports that the administration had prepared and distributed the forms in spite of an injunction obtained by citizens to prevent the printing of the ballots.

Struggle Is Tense.

The tense struggle between the Long and anti-Long forces over the Sixth District Congress seat, vacant since the death of Representative Bolivar E. Kemp six months ago, began Monday.

Mrs. Kemp last night formally accepted the district committee's nomination and in a lengthy statement defended the legality of the nomination method, asserting it paralleled the procedure by which Mrs. Hattie Caraway, of Arkansas, was sent to the Senate.

Milk Quiz to Be Resumed.

The investigating subcommittee of the Senate District Committee will resume public hearings on the local dairy industry shortly after December 9, Elwood H. Seal, special counsel, announced yesterday.

Insull Orator's Activities Told Utility Hearing

"Government in Business" Protests Spread by Paid Speaker.

The story of how an orator in the pay of Samuel Insull's Middle West Utilities Co. toured the country speaking against "Government in business" with his audiences unaware of his utility connections, was laid before the Federal Trade Commission utility hearing yesterday.

"Judge" V. H. Stone was sponsored as a speaker in the Midwest by Martin J. Insull, brother of Samuel Insull, and Martin instructed branch managers in the utility empire to procure dates for Judge Stone before Rotary, Kiwanis and Lions clubs, high schools and public meetings, letters indicated.

Insull Bore Expense.

"The judge makes very good speeches against the Government in business," Insull wrote his subordinates. "If you can arrange for some dates for him in your territory at our expense we shall be very glad indeed to have you use him."

The speakers' bureau, the hearing was told, was the private affair of Martin J. Insull. Testimony showed he pushed public speaking in favor of private utilities vigorously.

To one official he introduced Judge Stone with the comment that "he is connected with an educational department which reports to me personally. He is making a tour of the country speaking against Government ownership. He is a member of the Lions Club and the Kiwanis Club and has entry to the clubs of these organizations."

Covered 28,000 Miles.

Stone was active in Nebraska and Kansas and reported to Insull that he had traveled 28,000 miles making speeches.

Lobbying activities in Florida were revealed in a letter from Peter O. Knight, utilities executive, to C. D. Barnes, of Stone & Webster, which was introduced.

Knight wrote Barnes that he had introduced in the Legislature a utilities bill drafted by utility lawyers, but that a "squarehead editorial" in the Jacksonville Journal spoiled his plan.

The editorial, and subsequent articles, he wrote, stampeded a House delegation and the bill lost out in hearing.

First Wife Gets Verdict In Suit Aganist Second

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 1 (AP).—Mrs. Wilna Rudy Otte, first wife of former Commonwealth Attorney W. Clarke Otte, was awarded a verdict of $25,000 today by a jury in circuit court here in her $50,000 alienation of affections suit against Mrs. Evelyn Lee Cook Otte, second wife of the former official. Both are divorced from Otte.

Attorneys for Mrs. Evelyn Otte said they would seek a new trial on the ground the verdict was not justified.

Borah Would Free All Isles

Wants America to Rid Self of Insular Territory.

(Associated Press.)

Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, said today if he had his way he would get rid of all American insular possessions except a few islands to protect the coast.

The Idahoan made the comment to newspaperman when questioned regarding the mission on its way here headed by Manuel Quezon, president of the Philippine Senate, in an effort to revamp the Hawes-Cutting independence act, which the Philippine Legislature has rejected.

Borah said he was so anxious to free the Philippines he would vote for almost any independence bill.

However, he regards the Hawes-Cutting act as fair and feels the islanders are unfair in their demands. He said they evidently want independence, but none of the initial hardships that go with it such as tariffs on their exports.

Appeal for Food Made For Southern Russia

Vienna, Dec. 1 (AP).—Cardinal Innitzer, Archbishop of Vienna, published another world-wide appeal today for contributions to relieve "the starving millions in southern Russia."

In an appeal last August he said the world should assist in a relief campaign he considered necessary to save further millions from starvation and "its accompanying horrors of cannibalism."

Volcano on Japanese Island in Eruption

Tokyo, Dec. 2 (Saturday), (AP). An eruption of Mount Tarumae, an active volcano on Hokkaido, northernmost of the main islands of Japan, was reported today in Asahi dispatches from Muroran.

Reports said ashes were scattered on nearby villages and a column of smoke 3,000 feet high arose from the crater.

Rich Southerner Sued In Lynching of Negro

Greenville, S. C., Dec. 1 (AP).—Allegations that C. F. James, wealthy planter, of the Taylors-Greer section, instigated the action against George Gree, 73-year-old Negro, by a masked band which killed him are made in civil suits for $30,000 filed against James here today.

Expressing Approval of Mob Lynch Action

Three pictures of Gov. James Rolph, jr. of California are shown in characteristic poses, as the Governor gave frank approval of the mob lynching of the kidnapers of Brooke Hart. "They'll learn that they can't kidnap in this State," he said.

Somerset Jury Action in Lynch Quiz Delayed

Circuit Judge Undecided on Issuance of Call for Meeting.

Princess Anne, Md., Dec. 1 (Spl.). If a Somerset County grand jury is summoned to hear evidence in the lynching of George Armwood, it will not meet before the latter part of next week, Judge Robert F. Duer said tonight.

The circuit court judge who, with his colleague, Judge Pattison, set free the four suspects seized by the National Guard and taken to Baltimore, announced he would hold court at Snow Hill, Md., next Monday and Tuesday. He said he did not know when a grand jury might be called.

The Crisfield Times, a weekly published in the home town of State's Attorney John B. Robins, today derided Gov. Ritchie and Attorney General Lane for sending troops to the Eastern Shore to arrest men who did not exist. Lane admitted Tuesday having discovered that two of the nine names furnished the National Guardsmen who came from Baltimore to make the arrests were fictitious.

"There are two inferences to be drawn from this sad affair," says the Times. "One is that Ritchie has been governor too long; the second is that age has affected his mind until he no longer is capable of governing."

State Senator David J. Warden, of Wicomico County, today called for a general State-wide protest against Gov. Ritchie's "military dictatorship."

93,500 Will Cast Lots for C.W.A. Jobs

Lotteries Will Determine Winners in Illinois.

Chicago, Dec. 1 (AP).—The Illinois Civil Works Administration will set up job lotteries to determine who gets the second 93,500 CWA jobs.

"We've decided this is the only fair way," said Chairman Robert J. Dunham today.

"Some such absolutely impartial method is necessary, especially in Cook County, where indications are that six men will register for each job we'll have available."

Kidnap Suspect Suicide in Jail

Sharkey, Cleared in Hamm Case With Touhy Gang, Hangs Himself.

St. Paul, Dec. 1 (AP).—Willie, Sharkey, called a "strong arm man" for the Touhy gang by the Government and an innocent person who became insane by his counsel, committed suicide in a jail cell today.

Several hours after his lifeless body was found dangling by two neckties, the foreman of the jury which acquitted Sharkey and three others of the William Hamm, jr., kidnaping received a letter threatening death.

The foreman, T. O. Sundry, 69, Kenyon, Minn., farmer, said he didn't take seriously the unsigned missive, which promised a one-way ride from which he "would never come back." It was postmarked Minneapolis.

Sharkey, 39, took his life on the second attempt, 66 hours after a Federal court jury decided he, Roger Touhy, Eddie McFadden and Gustav Schafer did not kidnap Hamm, millionaire St. Paul brewer, and exact $100,000 ransom.

Before the ties were knotted together and tied to a cell bar, Sharkel ripped his belt and sought to make a noose. It broke under his weight and was found in the cell.

Tomorrow the four, held here since August, were to have a hearing on their transfer to Chicago for trial on charges of kidnaping ohn ("Jake the Barber") Factor last summer for $70,000.

Flames Sweep New Vancouver Gas Plant

Vancouver, B. C., Dec. 1 (AP). Fire threatened destruction of the new gas production plant of the British Columbia Electric Co. today. Breaking out under the coal-landing wharf, the fire was spreading as firemen battled the flames.

Town's 'Bootleg King' Kills Self With Gun

Hoopestown, Ill., Dec. 1 (AP).—Austil Hickman, 45, known for several years as Hoopestown's "bootleg king," committed suicide today.

Hickman killed himself in his home with a shotgun. He recently had completed a 90-day sentence in the Vermilion County jail for bootlegging. A daughter survives.

Story Reveals How Reporters Braved Bullets at Lynching

They Telephoned Account of St. Joseph Attack "Under Fire."

St. Joseph, Mo., Dec. 1 (AP).—As the full power of the State was thrown today into investigation of the lynching here of Lloyd Warner, Negro youth, the story was told how two St. Joseph News-Press reporters dodged bricks and bullets in a gas-filled room to telephone details of the mob's action to their paper, from which they were relayed instantly, to Associated Press papers.

After the news spread that the Negro had confessed to attacking a young white woman, newsmen reported that there was talk of mob action.

Immediately the News-Press city editor, Arthur V. Burrowes, assigned Kenneth Chilcote and Harold M. Slater to the jail to watch developments.

They spent the afternoon playing pinochle, but gave up the cards when a crowd began gathering after nightfall. Denied the Negro, the mob started hurling bricks and stones through windows of the jail office, where the newsmen stood close to the telephone.

When the mob began its battering-ram assault on the jail door with a large iron pipe, Sheriff Otto Theisen, busy with a multitude of duties, turned to one of the reporters.

"Call Gov. Park and ask him for the militia," he requested. "Tell him you're me. I can't talk over a phone with all this noise going on."

Money Escort, 2 Bandits Shot

Crowd Flees When Guard Quits Armored Car to Open Fire.

Camden, N. J., Dec. 1 (AP).—A bank guard was wounded seriously and two robbers were believed to have been shot in an attempt today to hold up an armored truck.

A group of women and children waiting for a theater matinee fled as the guard stepped from his truck and opened fire on an automobile which had crowded the bank truck.

Four men were in the car. They returned the guard's fire, but a man with a sawed-off shotgun who had covered the driver dropped it and slumped to his seat. A man in the back seat also was described by a witness as having collapsed as the holdup car fled in the direction of the bridge to Philadelphia.

William Crouch, employe of the First Camden National Bank & Trust Co., was the guard wounded.

O'Brien's 32 years of service with the city entitle him to a yearly pension of $14,933.12.

Debt Default Again Indicated in Paris

New Cabinet Unlikely to Ask U. S. Payment.

Paris, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—The new French government of Premier Camille Chautemps has no intention of arousing further antagonism in the Chamber of Deputies by proposing to meet the December 15 war debt installment due the United States, it was indicated today.

Chautemps, already fighting for his cabinet's life on the 1934 budget issue, will not include that item of $19,154,000 in the estimates to be presented Parliament for approval, it was definitely established. He will be forced to give tacit approval to default and follow the practical road in his efforts to survive the budget issue in the chamber—an issue which has cost the lives of two governments in recent weeks.

Critic of Rolph Quits His Post

Governor Says Athletic Board Member "Out" Any Way.

San Francisco, Dec. 1 (AP).—Scoring Gov. James Rolph, jr., and his administration with a sweeping indictment, and referring to "the governor's unspeakable attitude in the San Jose lynching matter and his words to former President Hoover," Chaplain Leslie C. Kelley, resigned today as a member of the State Athletic Commission.

At Sacramento, Gov. Rolph laughed at Mr. Kelley's statement, because he said the commissioner had "begged" him earlier this week, after the San Jose lynchings, to reappoint him.

"All fakers are not gone yet," Rolph added. "I don't think Mr. Kelley got very much encouragement when he begged for reappointment. The whole boxing fraternity has been on my path, urging me not to reappoint him."

Declaring, "I have stood loyally by Gov. Rolph during my entire term of office, although he did certain things of which I did not approve," Chaplain Kelley said the recent appointment of another San Francisco man to the commission was "a plain indication that the governor knows that I do not belong with him."

Contrary to widespread rumors that Guy Lombardo's sponsors were tiring of the George Burns-Gracie Allen nonsense that has been a part of the show for nearly two years, Columbia came forward yesterday with word of their contract renewal on a long-term basis.

The band and comics will work out of the same studios this month for the first time in a dozen or so weeks when Lombardo opens an engagement at a Los Angeles hotel.

Vera Van, singer, and Jacques Renard's orchestra have been aasigned to Col. Stoopnagle and Budd for their return to the air Saturday, December 16. It is an arrangement, it is said, to permit a heavier spreading of the Stoopnagle and Budd talent.

The show will be heard Wednesdays and Saturdays at 9:15 p. m. and marks the first time the Van voice has gone to work on the air for a sponsor.

WJSV learned yesterday that the lady announcers it has been putting through the air trials this week are menacing the masculine contingent. One man nearly cut his throat, and believes he will do so if something isn't done about giving him a "voice warm with understanding • • • yet with a deep note of cheer."

WJSV, by the way, has in its files names, addresses and phone numbers of all lady announcer applicants.

Al Sheahan has found a new "Mr. Gallagher." He is Reinald Werrenrath, Metropolitan and concert singer. Both go to work with Ted Weem's orchestra advertising a product over an N.B.C. chain Saturday night, December 9.

Ambassador Bingham's Views.

In a Thanksgiving Day address delivered in London, Ambassador Bingham told his fellow countrymen that the conditions which led Great Britain to abandon the gold standard were comparable to those prevailing in the United States when the Administration issued its gold embargo order of last April. He also made the astounding statement that we had established an equalization fund to serve "the same general purposes" as the British fund and added sententiously that "it was being operated in the same wise and intelligent way."

Subsequently Mr. Bingham explained, in response to inquiries, that he was referring to the $50,000,000 R. F. C. fund for the purchase of newly mined gold.

It is extremely important that the American people should not be misled by uninformed assurances of this kind into believing that our monetary policies are patterned after those of nations in the position of Great Britain. We should have a clear perception of the unique character of our experiment and try to understand why the people of other countries are puzzled by our official manipulation to depreciate the exchange value of the dollar.

There are essential differences between our present practices and those of other countries. Great Britain suspended gold payments following an external run upon the gold reserves of the Bank of England. The run was caused by the financial collapse in Austria and Germany, which had tied up large amounts of British funds, created great uneasiness on the continent, and ended in heavy withdrawals of foreign balances from the London market. Unable to stop the outflow, the British reluctantly determined to suspend gold payments—a defensive action which was followed by a depreciation of the pound sterling which the government could not have prevented, had it tried.

The United States, on the other hand, was removed from the gold standard by an Executive order which reflected a deliberate and voluntary policy—not a decision forced by necessity. Mr. Bingham shows ignorance of the course of events when he says that the United States had to abandon the gold standard before its gold reserve had been entirely destroyed. In fact, this country had weathered successfully the heavy gold drains of 1931 and 1932, which followed the suspension of gold payments by Great Britain in the fall of 1931.

By the middle of 1932, foreign balances in the United States had been reduced to working minima, and were no longer regarded as a potential threat to our gold reserves. In the latter part of 1932, indeed, gold began to flow back into the country and we actually ended the year with $50,000,000 added to our monetary gold stock.

The gold drain which preceded the March bank closings was due primarily to domestic hoarding, although the panic conditions prevailing here naturally led to further remittances abroad in the early months of 1933. After the reopening of licensed banks, however, there was on balance a return flow of gold, both by import and by releases from ear-marked holdings, and during the month beginning March 4, nearly one and one-quarter billions of dollars returned to the Reserve banks from domestic hoards, including $645,000,000 of gold and gold certificates. Yet Ambassador Bingham regards the embargo upon gold payments as a defensive measure taken "before our gold reserve had entirely disappeared."

Attempts to discover nonexistent parallels between the British equalization fund and the gold buying activities of the R. F. C. reveal the ignorance concerning the character of our monetary policies to be found in high place. The British fund established many months after abandonment of the gold standard was designed to prevent extreme and erratic speculative fluctuations in sterling rates. The government did not attempt to control the movement of the exchanges, so far as general trends were concerned, but it tried to prevent excessive fluctuations in day to day rates. Even with this limited objective in mind the fund had to be increased until it now amounts to about $1,500,000,000 at par.

To compare this British equalization fund with the meager sum which the R. F. C. was authorized to obtain by sale of its debentures for the purpose of buying gold and depreciating the exchange value of the dollar is futile. The dollar is declining primarily because of practices and announcements, one important effect of which is to cause capital to flee the country. Such tactics are the very antithesis of the British policy, which is designed to place a restraint upon exchange movements without attempting to determine long-time trends.

If we persuade ourselves that our monetary management is in no respect different from that of other countries, we shall not only be closing our eyes to facts but we shall be left unprepared intelligently to enter upon the consideration of policy determinations that will have to be made sooner or later, either by ourselves or in cooperation with other nations.

The End of His Rule?

Franklyn Waltman, jr., of The Post's national news bureau, speculated in yesterday's paper upon the possibility that Gov. Ritchie's long rule of Maryland had been broken by his sending of troops into Somerset County to arrest the lynching suspects.

A native of Maryland and an authority upon its affairs, Mr. Waltman said that the governor's action had strengthened him, perhaps, with racial groups in Baltimore, but it had weakened him not only in the Eastern Shore counties but also in sympathetic Western Shore and rural sections.

It is Mr. Waltman's feeling that, despite the fact that Gov. Ritchie has broken all Maryland tradition by three reelections and has "demonstrated that he is one of the best political tacticians in the country," it appears on the surface to be "highly doubtful" whether he can again win State office.

The Post has no idea whether Gov. Ritchie aspires to another term or not. He will have served 16 years at the expiration of the present term. But The Post would like to see the issue of law enforcement carried to the people of Maryland with all the uncompromising directness of the governor.

It would be a fight worth making in a cause worthy of the best fight of even so experienced a campaigner as Gov. Ritchie. If he won it, the country would have Maryland's most effective answer to the hoodlumism and defiance of the Eastern Shore for the past two years. If he lost, at least it would have been in a fight worth making.

Still Cynical.

The Post feels it a duty to warn Commander in Chief Clifford Lanham against excessive optimism and self-assurance in his fight on the Pennsylvania avenue bird menace.

"I didn't see a starling," Mr. Lanham said after two or three night offensives on the feathered hosts. He meant, of course, that he didn't see any in the trees; they had moved to nearby buildings.

The superintendent of parks and trees ought not to feel too good over his temporary victory; he ought to take a lesson from the Federal Government's experience with the starlings.

Back in 1928, the Department of Agriculture honored the birds with quite a comprehensive study of their habits of breeding and feeding and roosting, and brought out a 30-page booklet. (Anybody who is interested may have one for 5 cents from the Public Printer.) It is a handsome job as to format and content. Besides interesting reading matter and excellent footnotes, it has pretty pictures and charts and graphs. It looks like a cross between a rotogravure section and the Federal Reserve Board's monthly report.

Moreover, it is the sort of deflationary work Mr. Lanham ought to read; it will restrain starling-fighters from getting too puffed up over temporary victories. It speaks of their "dogged persistence" and "bold aggression" and "irritating tactics" and of their "morbid pleasure in annoying neighbors."

It was a creditable work; Government experts put a lot of time and thought on it. But what was their reward for dignifying the starling? While the brain-trusters were absorbed in their studies, the ungrateful birds were sneaking across the Potomac and eating up the grapes on the Agricultural Department's experimental farm.

The Post would not like to discourage Mr. Lanham, but it is fair to make the observation that ever since their unhappy experience, agricultural pest-control experts have been devoting their attention to pecan borers, curculio worms, boll weevils and other bugs and insects more amenable to reason than a horde of pin-headed birds.

Paying in Our Cotton.

A dispatch from Rome states that it is believed in business circles that Foreign Commissar Litvinoff, now in Rome, will arrange with Premier Mussolini to pay existing Russian debts by delivering to Italy a quantity of cotton soon to be purchased on credit by the Soviet from the United States.

Last year Italy purchased from the United States $27,000,000 worth of cotton. In 1929 its cotton purchases amounted to $79,000,000.

The delivery of cotton by Soviet Russia to Italy would reduce by a corresponding amount the Italian imports of cotton direct from the United States, and it would seem that the rumor should be discredited. It is quite unlikely that our Government will negotiate credit transactions with Russia which would merely result in a liquidation of debt for Russia by a transaction which would deprive the present American exporters of their normal and legitimate markets for American raw materials or foodstuffs.

A Job Worth Doing.

Aside from whatever practical value the Civilian Conservation Corps might have—and the administration claims its fire prevention work has diminished timber losses by 60 per cent in comparison with last year—President Roosevelt made a wise decision to continue the camps another year.

The enterprise need not be justified at all upon a self-sustaining or partially self-sustaining basis. The idea behind it was to deal in some sane and practical way with the thousands of young men who, fresh out of schools, or thrown out of work, could not be absorbed into employment. They were roaming the country, thumbing rides and hopping freight trains—a restless, shifting mass of humanity chasing will-o'-the-wisp hopes of jobs. They were beginning to constitute social and police problems everywhere. Their presence and their condition as largely victims of forces over which they had no control, constituted a challenge to alleviation that could not be ignored.

Much of what they do may be wasted, as far as conserving natural resources is concerned. But the experiment is creating national reserves of a better sort. The young men have come through with healthier bodies and happier outlooks. At least they have not been abandoned to their own devices, which in their despair might have bred lawlessness.

Certainly, with all the money we are putting into buildings and roads, a minor investment in human beings is worth while.

District Traffic Problems.

Washington's foremost traffic problem is the congestion resulting from a great influx of motor vehicles into the downtown district from 8 to 9 a. m. and an outflow of traffic from about 4:30 to 5:30 p. m. At other hours of the day motorists usually have little difficulty in reaching their destination in reasonable time.

In making his study of local problems Commissioner Hazen intends, quite properly, to concentrate his efforts upon facilitating the movement of vehicles during the rush periods.

It has been suggested a number of times that certain congested streets be devoted to one-way traffic during the rush hours. For example, Mr. Hazen thinks Sixteenth street might be used for southbound traffic only for an hour during the morning rush, and for northbound traffic only for a similar period at the close of the Government's regular working hours. Otherwise the street would be open to two-way traffic as at present.

The practicability of changing the rules governing traffic on an important street four times per day is open to serious question. A large number of officers would be necessary to supervise the changes. Even so, the sudden disruption of two-way traffic might be so confusing as to offset any advantages that might arise under this plan.

At any rate, it is apparent that the major defects in the present system could not be overcome in this way. The problem goes much deeper than the mere extension of space for the incoming and outgoing streams of automobiles. During the rush periods traffic is not only congested but extremely sluggish. A great deal of time is wasted in starting and stopping. A smooth flow is impossible because the signals often turn red before the entire line of traffic gets in motion.

The whole system of controlling traffic in Washington might well be scrutinized. It is to be hoped that the study to be sponsored by Commissioner Hazen will extend to the basic problems underlying the present unsatisfactory conditions.

At Montevideo.

The Pan American conference will open formally on Sunday in Montevideo. Delegates from all the American republics are in attendance. Secretary Hull, as head of the Pan American Union and spokesman of the United States, is the principal figure of the conference.

Although the list of questions to be dealt with by the conference has been so severely restricted that little may be expected in the way of international engagements, the gathering of enlightened representatives of the several republics can not fail to promote closer relations among the governments. The cultural and social aspects of the conference may prove to be more important than the formal discussions.

The American delegation has gone to Montevideo on a mission of good will. No better bearer of the message of neighborliness could be chosen than Secretary Hull. Whether his efforts to bring about reciprocal trade agreements bear fruit or not, it may be confidently expected that cordiality will mark the intercourse of delegates at the Uruguayan capital, and that all who are accredited to the Pan American Union will return to Washington with renewed faith in the usefulness of that institution.

Washington starlings seem to be more interested in the white lights than in housing and slum clearance problems.

Al Smith will have to admit that the brain trust is putting the alphabet into circulation.

Thanksgiving ought to last as long as the turkey holds out.

Letters to the Editor

FROM A "TORY."

Gold Basis Should Be Restored Before Too Late.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am a Tory. I am opposed to the President's monetary policy. Here are some of my reasons:

Everybody's prosperity depends upon a sound business revival. Such a revival seems to be in the making and ought to be given a chance. Business is dependent upon sound credit, and credit must have the support of universal confidence in the purchasing power of the dollar.

The Government is engaged in a great campaign of "watering" the dollar. It is purchasing gold in the world market at prices progressively higher than it is worth. This cheapens the dollar. The Government also is engaged in borrowing huge sums of money and proposes to borrow even greater sums by issuing Treasury notes and bonds. At the same time it is buying back large blocks of its own bonds through the Federal Reserve system and paying for them in depreciated dollars. In this way poorer money is being paid out to the public constantly.

The excuse for this wholesale watering of the dollar is that it will raise prices. Suppose it does, although there are those who dispute this; who is to benefit by an artificial raising of prices of everything we buy? Certainly the wage earner loses by it because prices always go up faster than wages do. The farmer must inevitably lose by it because his operating expenses and his living expenses go up faster than the prices which he receives for his produce. The business man loses by it because his business success depends upon public confidence and such confidence is necessarily shaken by uncertainty engendered by Government interference with the immutable law of supply and demand. The public dare not buy his goods or his services unless it believes that the purchasing power of the dollar is to be stable. The slow rise of prices through increased demand is one thing and the rapid fluctuation brought about by governmental interference is quite a different thing.

The President can not control inflation. Nobody can, once it gets a start. Nobody ever did. The French government tried it once, and nearly ruined the whole French people. Recently Germany tried it and the German people are still suffering from the experiment. Our own Government tried it many years ago, and it set us back a whole generation. It just can not be done. How can the President control the radical element in Congress at just a certain fixed point? How can he control the world market for gold or potatoes or steel rails at just a fixed price in terms of dollars? How can he control the laws of economics and prevent the normal interplay of supply and demand?

The President can not artificially produce prosperity. If he continues to water the American dollar how is he going to compensate the wage earner for the loss of his purchasing power? How is he going to compensate the holder of a life insurance policy or a savings bank account? The savings of a lifetime have been entrusted to one of these great institutions where they have been used to purchase supposedly sound securities which, nevertheless, are depreciating with the watered dollar.

Let the Government get back to a gold basis before it is too late; let it stop purchasing gold at fantastic prices, thus cheapening the dollar; let Congress and the Treasury Department call a halt to the process of borrowing, balance the budget, and save the credit of the United States. We are headed for the rocks. We are drifting toward Fascism very fast. We must stop. It is the duty of all the people to get back of any sensible movement to bring the Washington authorities to realize the colossal blunder we are making and to let them know that we are back of the Government 100 per cent in any right about face movement it is able to execute before it is too late.

HARRY SWAIN TODD.

ROASTS THE POST.

"Still Dominated by Outmoded School of Thought."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For membership in the Tory Club, I nominate The Washington Post.

I had hoped—in fact I had almost expected—that when The Post recently changed ownership the city of Washington would have an independent and unbiased newspaper with Associated Press news. But the tenor of recent editorials, coupled with the sniping sarcasm of Bargeron and articles by Robey, lead one to believe that The Post is still dominated by the out-moded laissez-faire school of thought and the dollar-minded philosophy of the discredited banker element and their Tory friends. To me, it is significant and enlightening to read Mr. Bargeron's articles, because I recall for whom he wrote and what he wrote before joining The Post.

I know little about monetary systems, &c., but it occurs to me, if there is any intention on the part of The Post to be fair, its editors will study and give attention to what has been recently said by such men as Fisher, Rogers, Berens and others. When Post editors and men like Dr. Sprague express intense conviction about admittedly controversial subjects—rather than studied opinion—the expressions of conviction can not be very convincing to the reader.

REPEAL A SHAM?

Canon Chase Holds Method of Ratification Was Wrong.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The lawyers who are opposed to testing the constitutionality of the so-called ratifying conventions in the 37 States which have been reported as ratifying the proposed twenty-first amendment have shown signs of weakness in arguing their case in The Post of Wednesday, November 29.

Those whom I represent prefer to adhere to the ordinary rules of dignified legal procedure.

We have confidence in the Supreme Court of the United States and in the power which makes for righteousness in our national life.

Our chief concern is not to stop the repeal of the eighteenth amendment in this time of panic, but to prevent the legalizing of an unconstitutional method of ratifying proposed amendments to the Constitution by a referendum vote in the States under the pretense of calling it a convention. A referendum at best registers only the temporary sentiments of a part of the people, and not the settled will and established convictions of the whole people by the orderly processes of the representative form of government upon which the republican institutions of the freedom of the English-speaking people have for centuries been founded.

Daily Talks About Books and Authors

Carlyle's Heroes.

In 1840 Thomas Carlyle delivered to fashionable audiences some of whom regarded him as a curiosity, a series of lectures on Heroes, Hero Worship and the Heroic in History. These were spoken informally, but with tremendous passionate earnestness, from notes; later he arranged them for publication and these talks are not only a permanent contribution to literature, but are in my opinion among the finest productions of his genius.

When I was a Freshman at Yale, Prof. Cyrus Northrup, afterward president of the University of Minnesota, required every one of us yearlings to select some essay and give a synopsis of it in the classroom. I shall never forget the afternoon, when, in the silence of my room, I began to read the essay on The Hero as a Man of Letters. I felt inspired, exalted, transfigured; it seemed as if Carlyle's spirit had entered into my heart and soul. I rose to a higher plane of thinking and living, and although I could naturally not live in a condition of chronic spiritual excitement, I have never been since that day quite the same as I was before. This work of literary genius did something to me; something for which as long as I live I shall continue to be grateful to Thomas Carlyle.

I suppose that is what great literature is for; it is not merely to entertain us, or to divert our minds, or to enable us to appreciate the beauty of style; it is to give us inspiration. Not only does it illuminate our intellect, it helps to build our character.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

By Robert Quillen.

My dear Louise: Today a girl some years older than you asked me to solve a problem that doubtless troubles many of her kind.

Here it is, in few words.

She left home to attend school and learned to smoke. Now she has no desire to quit. But her father and mother are old-fashioned people who regard smoking as one of the cardinal sins—for a girl—and she wishes to keep their good opinion.

Once she asked them what they would think of her if she smoked and they were horrified. They said she would never again seem sweet and pure and charming if she did it.

So now she does her smoking when she is away from home, and she has an uneasy feeling that she is a sneak. The question that troubles her is whether she is justified in sneaking to save the feelings of her parents.

Authorities differ as to the effect of smoking, but there is no doubt about the effect of sneaking.

Normally decent people simply can't do it without feeling ashamed of themselves. It kills their self-respect and robs them of a clear conscience. And when they have practiced it long enough to make it a habit and dull the pricks of conscience, they have adjusted themselves to a lower degree of decency and are less inclined to reject any immoral practice that can be hidden from the world.

The troubled young lady sneaks to save the feelings of her parents, perhaps; but also, you may be sure, to save herself from reproaches and worse things.

And the fact that she asks a stranger's advice is proof enough that she has a troubled conscience and doesn't feel very respectable. She is paying a big price for her smokes.

I can't advise her wisely, since she is determined to smoke, for I don't know her parents.

But I can advise you, young fellow.

Let's have no sneaking in our family. If you must smoke, sit on the arm of my chair to begin it.

It's a nasty habit, at best, and it makes your breath foul; but I'd rather have you smoke a smelly pipe without sneaking than to hide behind doors to puff a perfumed cigarette.

If you can't do a thing in the open, you can't do it at all without paying more than it is worth.

Love, DAD.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

MR. ROOSEVELT'S impromptu remarks at the Thanksgiving dinner of the Warm Springs patients reveals a quirk in his make-up that, for the life of me, I never have been able to understand, not that this is essential to the well-being of men, of course, but it nevertheless is a fact.

BARGERON.

Our own correspondent on the scene says that he made it the occasion to take a dig at his newspaper and gold policy critics, and the Associated Press carried the same account. What he did was, in introducing an amateur magician, and his attendant, Gus Gennerich, he said certain newspapers would report that they were to be the next Secretary of the Treasury and head of the Federal Reserve Board, respectively.

He meant to convey his belief that his hearers shouldn't believe what they read in those papers, of course, although the papers could answer in kind that it has been the caliber of some of his appointments that might conceivably mislead them into predicting the magician and Gennerich for the jobs.

I recall that the explanation of a wag about why J. P. Morgan took the midget in his lap that time was that, for all he knew, the midget might become a member of the Cabinet.

* * * *

HOWEVER, this is neither here nor there. What always has intrigued me is why Mr. Roosevelt makes these sort of remarks in the company he does. Why did he take this friendly little occasion at Warm Springs to answer his critics, so to speak?

You must understand the occasion. I was down there with him last Thanksgiving. It is the big day for the patients, the great majority of them kiddies between 10 and 16 years of age.

It is a party for them, that's what it is. The trustees of the foundation attend and, of course, the parents of some of them. But it is the youngsters' party. They come to the table in wheel chairs and on crutches and fill themselves with turkey and dressing and cranberry sauce and goodies and then they have entertainment. They have recitations and piano recitals and singing and the like. Then Mr. Roosevelt makes a little talk. He is good at it, too. They laugh gleefully at him and call for more. He knows most of them by their first names.

* * * *

NOW this time one of the jokes he told them contained some innuendo about his newspaper critics as well as the critics of his gold policy. And I can see the youngsters roaring with laughter and Mr. Roosevelt laughing back. Yet they could not possibly have understood what he meant. They don't know anything about the gold policy or about any of the controversial things which Mr. Roosevelt is doing.

In fact, very probably they thought he intended to make Gus Gennerich the head of something and they would be for this because Gus is about as much a hero to them as is Mr. Roosevelt. Anyhow, it was something funny Mr. Roosevelt said—and they laughed.

* * * *

THE country very much would like to hear him on the subject and with considerable elaboration. There is no daubt of that. Indeed, all sorts of efforts have been made to get him to speak. But he saves such comment as he has for the delectation of the youngsters at Warm Springs. This is not in criticism, pray; it is nothing more than a thinking out loud about the man, his many funny ways.

One might say, of course, that he was speaking to a larger audience than that immediately before him. It is doubtful if that was the case. There are newspapermen with him, of course, to report everything worth-while that he does and says. But here was something said so casually that the best of them were liable to miss its significance—as some of them did.

No, he was speaking only to those before him, making a crack which is understood by the close followers of what is going on, but which didn't mean a thing to those to whom he said it. He is a caution, he is!

It may be he thought that while the youngsters did not keep up with happenings in the world of finance, economics and politics they had heard criticism of him and he wanted to assure them their hero had not gone wrong.

Or it may be, and this is what I am inclined to think, he wants appreciative audiences. He always will have one with the youngsters at Warm Springs. They always will be his little "yes" men. There is not a Dean Acheson, a Dr. Sprague nor an Al Smith in the crowd.

ANIMAL MOVIE SALARIES.

The new motion picture code pertaining to salaries of performers also stipulates ranges of pay for wild animals that appear on the screen, says the Kansas City Kansan.

Elephants, for example, are to receive $100 a day, a rhinoceros can draw $350, and giraffes, presumably because of the high overhead, command as much as $500 a day. Skunks, for which there is only limited demand, get only $7.50 a day. The movies so far appeal only to the senses of sight and hearing, so the talents of the skunk can not be fully exploited. Otherwise such a disparity might not occur.

All of these are right tidy sums for daily wages, and from a reading of the figures many a member of the genus homo must wonder why the human race is referred to as the "highest" species.

Richard Mellon Death Mourned By Pittsburgh

Rites to Be Held Sunday for Youngest of Three Noted Brothers.

Pittsburgh, Dec. 1 (AP).—In a huge vine-covered mansion that banking millions built on Pittsburgh's upper Fifth avenue lies the the body of Richard Beatty Mellon.

While members of the wealthy clan prepare for the last rites for the youngest of the Mellon triumvirate of brothers, Pittsburghers generailly await sadly an opportunity to pay tribute to the memory of a man who contributed toward the building of one of the Nation's biggest industrial centers.

The multimillionaire banker and industrialist, who helped his internationally known brother, Andrew W. Mellon, erect one of the world's greatest fortunes, died of pneumonia today at the age of 75.

Although not so widely known as his brother, Richard Mellon had been in almost complete control of the family fortune since Andrew quit several years ago to become Secretary of the Treasury and later Ambassador to the Court of St. James.

He had been in failing health several months, but continued active until a few days ago, going to his office in the Mellon National Bank, of which he was president, and attending meetings of the directors of other enterprises with which he was connected.

It was while on an inspection tour of a water project in which he was interested that he contracted the cold which led to his death.

Despite his vast business enterprises, he found time for many civic and philanthropic activities. He made a gift of the New East Liberty Presbyterian Church, under construction, to the congregation with which he worshipped, and was a cofounder of the Mellon Institute.

The banker is survived by his widow, who was Miss Jennie King, whom he married in 1897. A son Richard K. Mellon, and daughter, Mrs. Alan Scaife, and his two brothers, Andrew and James Ross Mellon.

Funeral services will be at the Mellon mansion, 6500 Fifth avenue, on Sunday, at 2 p. m. Interment will be in Allegheny Cemetery, where his parents are buried.

RESTAURANT ORDER.

("Chain Restaurant Applies for Liquor and Wine License."—Headline.)

BREAKFAST.

Oh, waitress, what is nice today?
What do you think is good?
Some ham and eggs, a fine Tokay
And something aged in wood?
No, no; I like a breakfast light—
I'll tell you what I'll try—
Some griddle cakes, so brown and white,
And, well, a bowl of rye!

No cereal; I'll go without,
And never mind the bread;
A glass of lager and some stout,
Or English ale instead.
What? Maple sirup? No, I guess
I'll pass it up this morn—
Upon my cakes I must confess
I pour "white mule" or "corn."

LUNCH.

Hey! Ho! What shall I order, sweet?
I don't know what to choose;
I do not care for any meat—
What's new today in booze?
Some chicken king? Well, that might do;
A cocktail to begin;
Some buttered toast, a Scotch or two,
And, well, a little gin.

My doctor says I'm overweight,
He's handed me a scare—
He says I'll crash a pearly gate
Unless I show some care.
So just a few potatoes, fried,
A highball (prewar stuff),
A little brandy on the side,
And that may be enough.

DINNER.

Hello! Yes, yes, I'm in again—
It's time for dinner, quite;
I have a queer digestive pain—
I'll just take something light.
Some chicken soup, an O. F. C.,
And one Martini, dry—
Oh, make it two, for you'll agree
They're swell with custard pie.

Some spinach and a Rusty Ike,
A salad and some ale;
You know the sort of food I like—
(I miss the old brass rail).
Some pudding and some sherry clear;
Ah, yes, that will be fine!
And never mind the tea, my dear,
I'll take a quart of wine.

In a letter to the Mahatma Miss Cook says her heart fluttered when she met a man with beautiful eyes and brows. So Bob Ripley has been over there, too, eh?

MAKE MINE VANILLA!

The New York Society of Restaurateurs has voted to charge 35 cents for most cocktails, 40 cents for an old-fashioned, 50 cents a drink for straight whisky and to charge extra for the water or ginger ale in a highball. And these are the fellows who have been denouncing the bootlegger for 14 years!

The World of Music.

The world of music is to me
An ancient country far away
Which I am not allowed to see.
Beyond its borders I must stay.
Still, as a boy who looks at ships
And pictures of some distant land,
The wish is ever on my lips
That some day I may understand
And some day go at last to share
The ecstasy that must be there.

I hear them talk who know it well
About the golden hours of song.
I listen as its people tell
Of wood wind notes a half-tone wrong,
But as the orchestra begins
A most majestic symphony
The magic of the violins
No inner meaning bring to me.
I can not pass the citadels
To tread the path where music dwells.

I envy them who walk its ways
And claim the joys denied to me.
I know it is a realm ablaze
With beauty I shall never see,
I'd like to walk its shores alone
And feel my soul with rapture swept,
But I was fashioned deaf to tone,
So at the outer wall I'm kept.
Friends freely pass within the gate

Martin A. Leese, City Chamber President, Dies

Heart Ailment Fatal to Civic Leader Who Founded WMAL.

Martin A. Leese, president of the Washington Chamber of Commerce and founder of Station WMAL, died at 12:30 p. m. yesterday at his home, 3808 Huntington street, Chevy Chase Heights. He was 62.

Mr. Leese had suffered from a weak heart for the past six months, but had been confined to his home only for the past two weeks.

Born in Washington, Mr. Leese was educated in public schools and began his business career with the Flanagan Jewelry Co., on Seventh street. In 1900 he founded his own business at 614 Ninth street northwest, and established the first lens factory in Washington.

Radio attracted Mr. Leese from its inception and in 1907 he opened a new store at 712 Eleventh street northwest, where he founded the Capital's pioneer locally owned broadcasting agency — Station WMAL. The last three letters of this station correspond with the initials of its owner. When the station was recently leased to the National Broadcasting Co. A charter member of the Washington Merchants and Manufacturers Association, he served as the association's first president in 1918. Directors of the Washington Chamber of Commerce will hold a special meeting at noon today to adopt resolutions expressing their bereavement. The board of governors of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association also will meet for this purpose.

Praised as Civic Leader.

George E. Kneipp, second vice president of the chamber, said:

"Mr. Leese was a highly successful business man who gladly accepted the responsibilities of success by devoting years of effort to paying back a bountiful return for every opportunity his community afforded him. He worked unceasingly to further the best interests of the District of Columbia."

Frank M. Russell, vice president of the National Broadcasting Co., said:

"As owner of Station WMAL Mr. Leese made a contribution to radio in Washington which will not be forgotten."

Opponent Joins Pennsy in New Pick-UpService

D. L. & W. Abandons Fight and Adds Store Door Freight Delivery.

The first of the Eastern railroads objecting to the Pennsylvania system's store-door delivery freight service fell into line yesterday when the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co. was authorized to offer similar service.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, the Associated Press reported, gave the D., L. & W. permission to start the pick-up and delivery freight service after five days' notice to the public.

The service was started yesterday by the Pennsylvania, the Boston & Maine and Erie Railroads. Other roads protested the service, but most of them, including the Baltimore & Ohio, are reported ready to file tariffs offering the accommodation.

The commission yesterday received further protests against the service from the Motor Truck Club of Massachusetts, directed against the Boston & Maine Railroad. The truck organization claimed the delivery service will be accorded "only to a favored number of localities, shippers and commodities, and is denied to competing localities, shippers and commodities."

The truck interests asserted the service was designed to drive them out of business.

Blanton Asked To Defend Cuts

Budget Director Invited Also to Address U. S. Workers Dec. 18.

Leaders of the economy drive in Congress and the Administration will be invited to speak at the pay-cut mass meeting at Central High School December 18, E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, said yesterday.

Director of the Budget Douglas, Representative Blanton, of Texas, and Representative Lee, of Missouri, have been invited to speak. Mr. Douglas is credited with many of the economy measures initiated by the Administration. Blanton and Lee are the only members of the House who have gone on record as favoring the retention of the pay cut.

Mr. Babcock pointed out that in this way Mr. Blanton, who has complained that Washington newspapers treat him unfairly, will be able to present his case direct to the people.

In addition to all Government employes, leaders of civic and trade organizations have been invited to the meeting.

Viscount Astor, Lady Nancy's Husband, Is Visitor in Capital

M. P. Declares Britain Has Recovery Plan Similar to NRA.

Viscount Waldorf Astor, member of Parliament and husband of Lady Nancy Astor, member of the Longhorne family of Virginia, arrived in Washington yesterday for a visit with friends.

Stating he came to New York a few days ago on personal business, the viscount declined to discuss international affairs.

Asked if England is taking notice of the NRA, he replied that it is watching the experiment as closely as possibe, but that "one must remember we are 3,000 miles away and have many problems of our own."

He remarked, that England's recovery plan resembles this country's NRA in many ways, but that England's program calls for a more gradual upswing. The viscount said one noticeable accomplishment of both countries' programs is the reduction of child labor.

Agitation to build an air armada up to treaty strength does not mean England is out of sympathy with disarmament efforts, he said. It is ready to disarm as completely as any other nation, but the people point to the central powers of Europe and the United States, he said, and insist that England maintain equal defensive powers.

Viscount Astor entertained members of the Langhorne family at dinner last night at the Mayflower Hotel. He said he will leave Washington the first of the week for New York and will sail for England next Wednesday or Thursday.

Fishermen Oppose Coast Guard Plan

Gloucester, Mass., Dec. 1 (AP).—The fishermen of Massachusetts today came to the defense of their old friends, the Coast Guard, with pleas to the President that this ancient branch of the service be retained as an independent unit.

Glacier Priest Tells of Finding Alaskan Crater

Returning from hitherto unexplored lands in southwestern Alaska, the Rev. Bernard R. Hubbard, S. J., Arctic explorer, gave an illustrated lecture on his adventures before the National Geographic Society in Constitution Hall last night.

Although the purpose of his exploration was wholly scientific, his description of the trips was couched in anything but technical terms.

Motion pictures taken by Father Hubbard were explained by him in a graphic and humorous style.

The priest dwelt at length on the strange antics of his sledge dogs. Mageek, a multi-breed sledge dog, was the real hero of the exploration.

With a perversity quite alien to scientific deliberation, Mageek cavorted through several hundred feet of the many reels shown by Father Hubbard, and even in the discovery of a lake, with hot water at one end cold at the other, the dog played his role of film star.

The explorer's latest achievement is the discovery of the Akutan crater. Located in the center of an island, the crater was unknown even to the inhabitants of the region.

The employes decided at a mass meeting to continue operations, after the code committee refused an application of the mill for an increase of working hours to fill orders on file.

The workers declared they would continue until they received instructions to the contrary from Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA chief, to whom they appealed.

Pollard today said the vast majority of small property owners and wage earners are joined with the merchants in opposition to a sales tax in Virginia.

He asserted "rigid economy and retrenchment," together with "a reduction in certain appropriations and a realignment of others" and a "critical survey of the present costs of government in Virginia," are urgent needs.

He asked the governer to suspend judgment on sales tax proposals until his association can give him an analysis of the proposals.

Bank books showing accounts totaling $26,000 and $1,400 in cash were found in his pockets. Newman, who had lived in the room about a month, was a retired ironworker.

Newman's body was found by his landlord, Joseph Barrrett. Death apparently was caused by heart disease, although a certificate had not been signed last night.

New Chart of Chesapeake Bay To Prove Aid to Duck Hunters

A new chart of Chesapeake Bay from Thomas Point to Sandy Point is available for mariners. It was issued yesterday by the Coast and Geodetic Survey of the Commerce Department.

The chart is not only of value to the mariner plying those waters regularly to and from Annapolis, but is of especial interest to local yachtmen and to the thousands who frequent those waters on fishing and duck-hunting trips. Many duck blinds are shown.

It contains the results of recent topographic and hydrographic surveys made by the Coast and Geodetic Survey during the past year, showing particularly late information as to depths in the shoaler areas and the channels or passages at the entrances to creeks which may be used safely by small boats.

The courses and buoys from Thomas Point Shoal Light to Turkey Point are well covered for those entering South River. Other small water areas included are Big Pond, just north of Saunders Point; Ramsay Lake, Duvall Creek and Cherrytree Creek.

The 26-foot channel to Annapolis is indicated. For vessels desiring to anchor in Annapolis Roads, off the mouth of the Severn, prominent objects visible from this section of the bay are shown, each landmark bearing a descriptive note whereby it may be easily recognized. Severn River is shown to the electric railway bridge.

Unit Enforcing NRA Organized At Rockville

Compliance Board Wants Violation Complaints Put in Writing.

H. C. Ransom, manager of the Rockville, Md., Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. office, was elected permanent chairman of the Montgomery County NRA Compliance Board at its organization meeting last night. The meeting was held in the office of James H. Pugh at Rockville, counsel to the board.

H. Albert Buehler, Silver Spring grocer, was elected vice chairman and Mr. Pugh was designated secretary in accordance with the law.

The board decided that complaints against violators of the NRA codes must be in writing, signed by the complainant, and sent to Mr. Pugh. The name of the complainant will not be divulged, he said.

Complaints may be made by a third party, which would apply in cases of employes who receive less than minimum wages but are afraid to make complaint themselves.

Following receipt of a complaint the board will hold a hearing to which the person complained of will be invited. His failure to appear at the hearing will be transmitted to the Federal board with all evidence gathered by the board. Should he appear, his defense also will be transmitted.

Several verbal complaints had been received by the board, but no written complaints. These were discussed informally but no action will be taken until written complaints are filed. The board will meet again at the call of the chairman when complaints are received.

Jones Is Cleared In R. F. C. Inquiry

poration total $308,000,000, of which approximately one-tenth, or $30,000,000, has gone to Texas companies. New York has received nearly 25 per cent of the total, $86,000,000.

Jones, defending his position, said he believed those who filed complaints against him were aiding "unscrupulous lawyers who degrade an honorable profession and seek to use the courts of the United States and the United States Senate to further their own unholy purposes."

Quit Bank Job, He Says.

He explained he had forfeited his interest in the Bankers Mortgage Co. when he became head of the R. F. C. in April, 1932. The Midland Co., he said, was a subsidiary of the Bankers Mortgage and had been organized since the R. F. C. act had been amended to permit the formation of mortgage companies through which funds might be borrowed. He added that he had never been connected with the Southern Investment & Loan Co.

After the meeting, which was in executive session, Senator Fletcher (Democrat), of Florida, issued the following statement:

"As chairman and on behalf of the subcommittee, I wish to state that we have thoroughly examined the R. F. C. loans made to Bankers Mortgage Co., Midland Mortgage Co. and Southern Investment & Loan Corporation, all of Houston, Tex., and have found that the loans were justified and are, so far as can be judged by us, amply secured, and that Mr. Jones has not profited in any way from the making of the loans and has no personal or individual interest therein."

Jones said the Bankers Mortgage was given a loan of $1,[illegible] in July, 1932, on collateral of $2,[illegible] in first mortgages. In June, 1933, he said, the Midland Mortgage Co. borrowed $1,495,074, putting up $2,627,188 in first mortgage collateral.

The subcommittee, which is composed of the same senators who are investigating bankers and their stock-market activities, finished their session with a lengthy consideration of proposed legislative reform affecting the banking situation.

It is agreed generally that the subcommittee will recommend legislation to set up Federal regulation of stock exchanges. Tightening of income tax laws to prevent evasions such as have been revealed during the long investigation probably will be proposed also.

Aim at Market Rigging.

Following suggestions made before the committee Wednesday by Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank, of New York, the senators are looking toward legislation that would eliminate gambling in stocks. Stock manipulations through pool agreements and trading accounts, rather than normal speculation, will be the target of the proposed measure, it was indicated.

Senator Fletcher indicated there undoubtedly will be some recommendation also for amendments to the securities act to tighten up and clarify its provisions.

Aldrich will be recalled before the committee on Tuesday for questioning in detail on his proposed banking reforms. The rest of the week will be devoted to finishing up the inquiry into Chase Bank financing of various enterprises.

Fish Acclaims Smith's Stand

Republican Scores Money Inflation as Assault on Wage Earners.

Philadelphia, Dec. 1 (AP).—If inflation is "carried further" the 25,000,000 wage earners in manufacturing cities will "soon become the forgotten men," Representative Hamilton Fish, jr. (Republican) of New York, said tonight.

Fish said the proposal to "debase the dollar is an attack on the wage earners and industry in the North and East" and defended Alfred E. Smith's stand in criticizing the Administration's monetary policy.

Smith, he said, is "no more a friend of the money changers in the East for favoring the gold standard" than the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, of Detroit, "is a champion of the silver mine magnates of the West for urging inflation."

He spoke at the annual dinner of the St. Andrew's Society.

Fish said if Prof. George Warren, "whose sole claim to fame is as an agricultural expert who persuaded hens to lay by electricity, is permitted to experiment with a fluctuating or commodity dollar, business recovery will be retarded," adding:

"Prof. Warren, having succeeded in deluding the hapless hen into laying by electricity, now thinks he can restore business confidence and make the helpless taxpayer produce more golden eggs by a process of inflation."

NRA Board Quits At Lincoln, Nebr.

Members Say Complains Get No Action.

Lincoln, Nebr., Dec. 1 (AP).—Asserting Lincoln's NRA compliance board has failed to function, its two members representing employes today presented their resignations.

In a public statement Britt Pryor, president of the Lincoln Central Labor Union, and W. C. Clayton said the board had heard many complaints, "some trivial and some flagrant violations, and to date there has been nothing done."

They said that in Lincoln there is only about 30 per cent compliance with the NRA codes, adding that "in the face of the large amount of criticism of the board for which there is much foundation, we just can't go on."

Tuberculosis Battle Gaining In Montgomery

Health Officer Urges Aid in Financing Work Now Held Encouraging.

Encouraging results in the fight against tuberculosis in Montgomery County were reported yesterday by County Health Officer Dr. V. L. Ellicott.

Continuation of the present work, he stated, should decrease deaths from the disease. Outlining preventative work in the county, Dr. Ellicott said recent discoveries in methods of aiding sufferers are being employed.

The financing of the tuberculosis program of the last year, he explained, has required the use of funds beyond those provided in the regular budget of the county health department.

While the county commissioners and the county education department contribute to the work of checking the disease, the Tuberculosis Association defrays a large portion of the expense from popular subscription, he reminded.

One of the new measures instituted in the county is the establishment of clinics, and these are entirely dependent of funds advanced by the coun' commissioners until returns from the Christmas seals are available, he said, adding:

"Tuberculosis prevention is needed most when times are hardest, and it is therefore doubly essential that residents of the county give us their whole-hearted support."

Ban on Gas Station Premiums Upheld

Justice Adkins Backs Ickes on Code Violation.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins, District Supreme Court, late yesterday upheld Secretary of Interior Ickes in his determination that certain gasoline stations in the Detroit area were violating the fair trade code by giving premiums with each sale of a petroleum product.

"The giving of premiums by plaintiffs with their sales of gasoline in intrastate commerce may be prohibited by Congress because of its effect upon interstate commerce in petroleum products," Justice Adkins ruled.

Morelands Arrive To Spend Holidays

Come From Belgium to Stay Until January.

The United States vice consul at Antwerp, Belgium, and Mrs. William D. Moreland, jr., who arrived in Washington in time to spend Thanksgiving with her parents, Col. and Mrs. Clement L. Bouve, were guests of honor at a dinner given at the Shoreham last evening, by Dr. Karl C. Korley.

Other guests of Dr. Corley included Miss Isabel Southgate, Miss Mary Bouve, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Flood, Mr. Warren Bouve and Mr. Edmund Corley.

Mr. and Mrs. Moreland are on leave of absence, and will remain in Washington until the end of January.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Dr. A. Gordon has written an interesting article, the title of which is "The Transmission of Obsessions to Delusions." He reports the history of two persons, closely related, who were peculiar as children. They remained out of the ordinary for several years, having more than one peculiarity and oddity of behavior and opinion, but nevertheless fitting fairly well into their surroundings. As time went on they became progressively more and more peculiar. Eventually their obsessions developed into delusions, and they were such complete misfits that it became necessary to give them some institutional care.

In this instance, the children were of the schizoid type of mind and personality, and the type of mental personality they developed was schizophrenia. Translating these terms into others, the children were shy, lonely, peculiar, not caring to play with other children, not at all socially minded or inclined. The mental trouble they eventually developed is commonly known as dementia precox.

Certain peculiarities of opinion and behavior while they were moderately near normal were called obsessions. As time went on these peculiarities became more marked; those who indulged them began to believe in them as right, and all opinions that disagreed with them as wrong. Obsessions had changed into delusions and were essentially the same mental vagaries, but the attitude toward them had changed.

The principal point made by Dr. Gordon is that a good, clear headed observer should have been able to recognize the way these people were headed when they were children and, having done so, could have advised the kind of, family and school training which might have kept them on a plane of sanity; might have made them fit into society, leading useful lives.

Miss Jackson Introduced At Dinner and Large Dance

Prominent Guests Throng Mrs. Curtis' Club on F Street.

Mr. Robert Jackson, secretary of the national Democratic committee, entertained at a large dinner, followed by a dance, last evening at the Sulgrave Club, at 1925 F street, when he presented his daughter, Miss Hope Jackson, to society. Miss Jackson is a student at Sarah Lawrence College and spends several week-ends a month in the Capital, where she is taking an active part in the debutante festivities.

Mr. Jackson received the guests with Miss Jackson and Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan, another daughter of Mr. Jackson. The debutante wore a gown of heavy chalk-white crepe, fashioned on classic lines, with a square neckline outlined by a narrow band of mink and caught on either side with large turquoise and pearl clips. She carried a bouquet of orchids. Mrs. Morgan wore a handsome gown of black velvet, fashioned with a brief train.

The club lent itself well to the party. After dinner additional guests had been invited for the dancing, and several charming card rooms provided divertissement for those who did not wish to dance.

Among the guests were the Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, Mrs. George H. Culbertson on Bridge

A Triple Coup.

Mrs. B. E. Bennett, writing from Jacksonville, Fla., reports that interest in Bridge in America's winter playground is increasing all the time. A series of matches have been played recently between a team representing Orlando, Fla., on which played Messrs. Sidney Ives 2d as captain, with Col. Pierce, Robert Carr and Walter Lee as his teammates, and a team representing Jacksonville, of which Mrs. Bennett, was captain, with Mrs. Winifred Griner and Messrs. Frank Walker and Bryan Simpson as teammates. The contest was hard-fought.

One of the interesting hands provided that rarity in Bridge, a triple coup. The hand was:

North, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

The bidding which produced the best result occurred in the room where the Jacksonville pair sat North and South. It was:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	2♡	Pass
3♣	Pass	3♠	Pass
4♣	Pass	4NT	Pass
7♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

The Opening lead was a diamond, which was won in Dummy, and the singleton club was led and finessed. Another club lead revealed that North had a natural club loser. The only means by which this loss could be averted was to shorten his hand to the same number of trumps as held by his opponent in the West. This he did by means of the triple coup, and thus fulfilled the Grand Slam contract.

The shortening of trumps was effected by returning to the Dummy with a diamond, leading the Ace of hearts and ruffing with a club, and repeating this process with diamond and spade leads taken in the Dummy until North held only two trumps. The eleventh trick was won in Dummy, and at the twelfth lead, West found his Queen hopelessly encircled.

North	East	South	West
1♣	Pass	2♡	Pass
3♣	Pass	3♠	Pass
4♣	Pass	4NT	Pass
5♣	Pass	7NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Books

Roget's 'Thesaurus,' Famous Word-Book, Reaches 77th Edition.

The seventy-seventh edition of Roger's "Thesaurus" has just been issued in this country by Longmans-Green. This amazing work, a listing of the words of the English language in precisely 1,000 categories of ideas, has long been seen on the desks of writers whom one fondly believed thought up their own synonyms. This latest edition contains a foreword narrating the history of the book, in which this formidable item is recorded: "It took three generations of the Roget family to compile and perfect this "Thesaurus." It also seems that the same London firm at the same address in Paternoster Row has been printing the book for 90 years. "Thesaurus," by the way, is Greek for "treasury."

Nonfiction to the Fore.

An anthology, "EVERYBODY'S LAMB," edited by A. C. Ward, and illustrated by Ernest H. Shepard. (Harcourt Brace, $3.75.)

A study, "CAVERNS OF VIRGINIA," by William M. McGill. (Commonwealth of Virginia, State Commission on Conservation and Development.)

Here is a sufficiently varied batch of books which take one from the Gentle Elia to the correct pronunciation of "Newfoundland"—there seem to be four of the latter. All are remarkably excellent, even in a world where half the books which appear are thrown at you with a range of commendatory adjectives to astonish Mr. Roget.

If Charles Lamb is little read nowadays except in school, this volume is the best possible inducement to reviving wide interest in a rare and charming personality. Mr. Ward has selected from the "Essays of Elia" the letters and the miscellaneous prose of Lamb those parts which show Lamb the most distinctly. He has arranged them in groups according to general subject matter —Memories and Experiences, Peculiar People, Books and Pictures, Playgoing, Festivals and Customs, London and Londoners, Pleasures of the Palate and Miscellany. Every side of Lamb is given its due weight; he is all here.

One used to think of Lamb with a little squeamishness. He was the Gentle Elia, somewhat prissy, abounding in a sweetish whimsicality. Yet if one reads him fully, one discovers, as Mr. Ward points out, that he had "a hard core of commonsense, a streak of contempt for namby-pamby which refreshingly tempered his more genial qualities." A man who worked 33 faithful years as a clerk in the East India House, and yet kept his head and his fresh interests in a hundred other things, had in him what we briefly call "stuff." As for his devotion to a mad sister who had murdered their mother during a relapse, a devotion which was unspoiled for 38 years until she died at last, one must find a better word or, preferably, keep silent. And apart from all this in a serene place was the mind of one of the foremost English essayists, a pioneer scholar of the Seventeenth Century drama, a keen critic of acting and painting—in short, "an amateur of life." Lamb is still eminently worth knowing.

The volume is parallel in format with "Everybody's Pepys" and "Everybody's Boswell," two books also published by Harcourt Brace which give the essence of Pepys and Johnson. As in the others, Mr. E. H. Shepard's pen has drawn a number of unsurpassable illustrations. Readers will remember his work in the A. A. Milne books. Altogether, "Everybody's Lamb" will make your fingers itch to own it and your eyes widen to read it.

Anybody who has seen Endless Caverns or those at Luray will be interested in the next book, a survey called "Caverns of Virginia." Not alone for the text matter, but for the surprise of finding what governmental reports can look like. There was a time when official reports had all the handsomeness still haunted by the minutes of a medical association, which to my mind is practically a minus quantity. That is true no longer, at least in Virginia. For here is a sober and thoughtful account of limestone caverns, their origin, structure and history made into as beautiful a book as one could ask for. Full credit must go to Mr. Edward L. Stone and his printing company in Roanoke, who made the book, but some share must be given a governmental board which insisted upon so high a quality.

Mr. McGill, assistant State geologist, has written a constantly readable account of the caverns. The nine developed caverns are described minutely. Maps and diagrams are shown in plenty and all through the book appear as beautiful photographs of these underworld wonders as I have seen. All this marvel of lace and column, of fringe and tapestry and grotto, is explained in a fashion which demands no course in geology for comprehension. "Caverns of Virginia" is a sound and valuable book. There is no doubt that if you have ever been in a cavern you will want to read this book and learn more about them.

Date Scones and Muffins Make Delicious Desserts

The season calls for plenty of dates. In fact, from now on, folks will be dating themselves up more and more with these small fruits. Especially in the date and nut torte that's a favorite with Secretary of War George H. Dern.

This particular dessert (very easy to make) goes like this: Beat up 4 egg yolks nice and light. Then beat in 1 cup sugar. Next, sift together 1 cup sifted pastry flour and 1 teaspoon baking powder. Mix this with 1 cup pitted, chopped dates and 1 cup coasely chopped nuts, and add to first mixture. Then fold in the stiffly-beaten whites of the four eggs, turn mixture into a shallow buttered pan about 7 by 7 inches, and bake in a moderate oven (350 F.) about 30 minutes.

Date Scones.

Date scones are not only slick to eat, but make a very convenient kind of biscuity-cookie to serve with a cup of tea or coffee when friends drop in.

These start with 2 cups of sifted flour mixed and sifted with 4 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon sugar. Next work in ¼ cup butter as you would for biscuits, and add 1 cup pitted, chopped dates. Then separate yolk and white of 1 egg, save out half the white and beat the rest with the yolk. Add this beaten egg to 2-3 cup rich milk or thin cream, and mix into first mixture to make soft dough. Put dough on floured board and lightly pat or roll out about ½ inch thick. Then with sharp knife cut dough in criss-cross lines so as to make diamond shapes. Brush top with reserved egg white (unbeaten), sprinkle with granulated sugar, put on greased baking sheet, and bake at 425 F. about 12 minutes.

Date Cream.

For a quick, good dessert worth remembering for hurry-up occasions, here's another good number: Mix 2 cups pitted dates cut in small pieces with 1 cup coarsely chopped walnuts and 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Let mixture stand in refrigerator till very cold. Then whip up 1 cup heavy cream, add 2 tablespoons powdered sugar and a few drops of your favorite flavoring.

Date Muffins.

Then there are the old favorite date muffins—which are sweet and rich enough to serve both as bread and dessert for lunch or supper. For these, cream 3 tablespoons sugar with 3 tablespoons butter, add 1 well-beaten egg and beat whole mixture hard. Next sift together 2 cups sifted general purposes flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt. Mix a little of this with 1 cup pitted dates (cut small) and add to butter mixture. Add remaining flour mixture to butter mixture alternately with 1 cup milk. Turn into well-buttered muffin pans and bake at 500 F. about 25 minutes.

The Family Marketer

Stuffed Tomatoes Are Basis of This Vegetable Dinner.

If the weather man will bless us with as glorious a day as was Thanksgiving Day, no one will stay at home. No one will want to cook, everyone will want to be out of doors.

She has tried to eliminate as much work as possible in the planning of Saturday's menu. The absence of meat will be in some homes a relief after the over-indulgent partaking of turkey. The cheese sandwiches are a meat substitute.

Here's an easy way to make them. Slice your bread, make your sandwiches, and fry them on both sides in butter in the frying pan. Use just enough grease to keep them from sticking, but not enough to saturate the bread. They are delicious.

Stuffed tomato salad has a world of possibilities. The stuffing can be varied in numerous ways. Cold boiled cabbage as a base, mixed with a little chow-chow, a little sweet pickle juice, a whiff of onion, a dash of green pepper, spooned into the tomato center and served with French dressing makes a delightful change. Or, you can make your stuffing with chopped carrots and celery, finely chopped green pepper, and mayonnaise. Cold boiled vegetables can be combined with French dressing into a delectable stuffing. Cooked fish, minced meats and fowl all have their places.

For Sunday's dinner, there are any number of variations of the fruit salad theme. Orange and grapefruit, with finely chopped mint or a dissolved after dinner mint, add a note of charm. Avocado with fresh or canned grapefruit is of a more stable tone. Any scraps of fresh or canned fruit can be molded in gelatine to make an alluring salad symphony. A combination of orange, diced red apple, whole seedless grapes, or halved Tokay grapes, canned peaches, sweet cider or grape juice will form a satisfying coda to any dinner.

Washington Residents Have Great Fun Turning Three Old Houses Into One Home

Home Cooking And Good Cheer Please Diners

Hostess Does Her Own Buying for This Attractive Restaurant.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Real homecooking! Delicious hot breads, rolls, biscuits, muffins! The hostess is there to greet you and when she says "Make yourself at home" she means it.

Three large rooms from a lovely Connecticut avenue home have been turned into dining quarters for those who like fresh vegetables, carefully cooked meats, and delicious cakes and puddings. Only the best on the market is served. The hostess sees to that, as she does the buying herself. Any morning will see her down at the market looking over the fresh bunches of broccoli, spinach, hunting around for the best squash, potatoes, talking the butcher into the choicest cuts.

Regular 75 cent diners are served every day. On Sunday they're available from 12 noon until 8 o'clock in the evening. It's a real pleasure to sit at a table by the wide windows with a tempting plate before you, and look out on Connecticut avenue at the people hurrying to and fro.

Anybody who has heard of Georgia has heard of sugar cane, but not half so many have tasted it. It's considered a delicacy away from the State because it's so hard to get. Usually, by the time it's shipped from the plantations and reaches it's destination, the stalks have a tendency to dry up. But the proprietor of a fruit company has trucks which regularly travel from Florida to Washington bearing loads of tropical fruits. On a recent trip they picked up some sugar cane in Georgia and brought it in. Such nice juicy stalks as they are, too!

And that's not all they brought. Some good Georgia cane syrup besides. Try it some morning on your sausages and hot cakes! There's a feast fit for a king!

It looks like any other fruit cake, but it tastes like 1 out of 100. It's made by an old southern English recipe which was formerly in the possession of Mrs. Emma Peebles Blanton, who was born in 1836 at Petersburg, Va.

Imagine a cake that's 92 per cent fruit and nuts! That's exactly what this one is. Fourteen varieties of fruits and seven different kinds of nuts combine to make it.

After the cakes are baked they're stored away in a light, airy room, where they are kept at a temperature of about 36 degrees for eight months or a year before being put on the market.

These cakes may be bought in two sizes—1½ pounds and 3 pounds. The tin box in which they come makes them ideal for shipping away as presents. Included with the cake in the box is a little jar of brandy hard sauce, which adds a certain zip to their already pungent flavor.

The couple who wish only enough fruit cake for a "tete-a-tete" may step into a downtown store, ask for a "can of fruit cake" and receive a delicious little cake all packed in a can, for 25 cents.

Candy for the holidays! Not just any kind, but very special candies, prepared by an expert in her own kitchen. All you need do is go to the phone, call a certain number, give your order, say whether you want it delivered or called for, and this "home-made" candy is yours at a very reasonable price.

She makes fudge with or without nuts, dates stuffed with black walnuts or pecans, chocolate-covered raisins or nuts and chocolate-covered marshmallows.

Buffet suppers may be fun for the guests, but to the hostess they're a nuisance unless she has modern serving equipment. With one of the buffet sets on sale now in an F street shop she could serve a variety of dishes in the easiest and simplest manner possible.

The set includes a four-compartment chafing dish, four deep casserole dishes set in a tray filled with water kept at an exact temperature by an electrical arrangement. A bright chrome and lustrous black frame make this set the answer to a housewife's prayer. Coffee and beer services are included.

Grapefruit, oranges and tangerines blended together result in the newest Florida fruit, the tangelo. They're the same shape but a little larger than a tangerine, the color of a grapefruit, with the taste of an orange slightly flavored with grapefruit and tangerine juice. On sale at a downtown fruit shop.

Mocha basket is the name of a French pastry a bit different from usual confections of this type. Mocha butter cream makes the twisted handle. Cake, with toasted coconut on its sides and mocha butter and rosebuds on its top, makes the diamond-shaped basket. Basket, handle and rosebuds may be purchased for 10 cents.

Bright Stars.

By Katherine Smith.

Bright stars
Dance through my soul and spill
As words upon my lips.

And through your soul
Stars are dancing, and though
Your lips are still
I see them quiver
In your eyes.

Are they the same
Bright stars?

Economics Student Helped Her Family

The story of the 16-year-old home economics girl in a vocational class in Arizona, who reduced the family expenditure for food from $48 to $27 a month, illustrates the practical character, especially under present-day economic conditions, of the home project activities of those who enroll in homemaking courses in high schools throughout the country.

The girl's experience is related as a typical one in a report of the Home Economics Division of the Federal Office of Education, made public today.

In addition to the skill she acquired in handling money and accounts, in planning, preparing, and serving nutritious, well balanced meals, and in doing the family marketing, this young woman discovered that homemaking is a business in itself for which previous training is not merely an asset but an essential.

What she accomplished in her project activities is typical of the accomplishment of hundreds of other girls in home economics classes who are carrying home projects in various phases of homemaking.

Velvet Hair Twists Make Newest Hats

In Gold and Silvery White They Simulate Real Chignons.

The newest and most interesting hats are accompanied by velvet and other materials twisted to resemble hair braids and chignons. Usually the simulated hair is golden yellow or silvery white.

One of the most attractive of these unusual hats is a black felt model with wide turned-back brim and yellow velvet braid across the front of the brim's base. The hat is worn far back on the head so that the velvet trimming gives the effect of a peasant headdress.

Amusing pork-pie hats also have fabric hair arranged in smooth chignons in the back or flat curls on the sides.

The peasant is not the only influence in the new millinery. The fisherman has also inspired several off-the-face versions, usually in felt. This type of hat, with flat turned-back brim, has a sharp peak at the back of the crown which gives an exceedingly youthful look to the wearer.

The Renaissance page-boy caps also have been adapted to the present mode. Small rolled brims are fastened to crowns with huge crystal and pearly ornaments on one side. These jaunty caps are worn on one side of the head, dipping over the right eye and exposing the hair on the left side.

A smart tailored ensemble consists of navy blue straw fabric hat and Eton collar. Both the collar and off-the-face hat are trimmed with white pique ruching and white pique bows. Perched on the top of the hat is a circlet of the ruching which gives the effect of a crest.

Shining Christmas Wrappings Put You in Gay Holiday Mood

Directed by Amos Parrish

New York, Dec. 2.—Are you a sufferer from the chronic "I-don't-feel-like Christmas" blight? Then march yourself down to the nearest store that sells the new Christmas tie-ups and you'll find yourself making a speedy recovery!

They shine and glisten and sparkle and crackle with such infectious gaiety that they'd be challengers to a gloom equal to old Scrooge's. . . .

Probably just one dainty paper wrapping—white with tiniest gold stars peppering it—will be enough to infect you with that holiday flutter.

Quaint or Modern.

The designs this year are very characterful. Some with a peasant-like quaintness. Some sophisticated. One of the naive types has bright green and blue and red Christmas trees primly placed all over a tinsel ground. A modern one has big flowers and coin dots which would make it very outstanding in someone's stack of Christmas presents.

It's smart for the backgrounds of papers to be in dark colors . . . even black. "Black!" you say, "I don't know as I'd like that." But you would . . . with stiff wooden angels in pastel colors, and trees and churches that look as if they'd been taken from toy villages. For all its modern-ness it has more of the old-time Christmas feeling than almost any paper we've seen.

Stripes and Plaids.

Some papers have taken hints from dress materials . . . they use diagonal stripes, tiny shepherd's checks or huge bold Normandie plaids. Scotties park on many papers again; they seem to have become almost as much of a Christmas institution as Santa Claus himself.

Maybe you'll agree with the faction that thinks there's nothing like plain gold or silver paper to make a gift look exciting. Or maybe you'll want to use cellophane, either in plain color, or clear and pulled taut over a patterned paper.

If you've nothing shiny on the wrapping itself, you should get it into your tie-up. Gold or silver tinsel with colored threads. And the newest tags are gold or silver stars in circles, with a silk cord attached so that they may be hung on the Christmas tree after they've done the greeting.

Leaflet on Wrapping.

Because we're bursting with ideas on how to wrap packages in interesting ways, we've put them all in a leaflet, which you'd like. You may have this if you'll send us the filled-in coupon as requested.

Capital's Old Curiosity Shop Aids Children

Society Women Bring Their Treasures to Be Sold for Charity.

Washington has its "Old Curiosity Shop" operated by society women, and as fascinating as the jumble shop Dickens wrote about so eloquently long ago.

It is known as the "Thrift Shop" and is housed in a building at 1011 E street. On its counters and shelves, antiques rare autographed books, Sheffield plate, Currier and Ives prints and a thousand other things that once graced the mansions of the rich jostle one another gayly. They are there to be sold for five charities, all for the welfare of unfortunate children of the Capital.

"We have everything on earth," Helena K. Graham, gray-haired manager of the shop, said yesterday. "People tell us they find things here they've been hunting all over the city. There are knick-knacks at a cent apiece, and rare old samplers, tapestry screens, Oriental rugs, brasses and lovely old miniatures that would be priceless but for the fact that some one has parted with them for the sake of bringing gladness into some child life."

Knows Her Stock.

Mrs. Graham, whose life has been lived against a background of lovely things, knows at a glance the value of each addition to the shop's stock. While she talked she appraised the value of a tall silver coffee urn just arrived in the arms of a generous Junior Leaguer. She tentatively agreed to accept for commission sale three magnificent diamond rings, out of which the donor gave a large share of the proceeds. She inspected red gauze Christmas stockings.

"All through the year, we put away nice fresh articles, some of them perfectly unique, into big boxes in what we call our Christmas closet," Mrs. Graham explained.

"Just before Christmas, we assort and stuff them into these stockings, furnished by Mrs. John R. Williams, chairman of the Thrift Shop committee. She sent us 50 the other day. And she will probably send us 50 or 100 more, although she doesn't know it yet. She's in Aiken now."

An assortment of beautifully dressed baby dolls and young lady dolls brought in for inspection were the contribution of Mrs. Ingobore Groom, patron of the shop.

For three years, Mrs. Groom—in memory of her little girl, an only child who died years ago—has collected from the Thrift Shop broken, dismembered, ragged and unclothed dolls; taken them home, reconstructed them and returned them in freshly laundered, handmade outfits that future small mistresses may put on and take off.

Gingerbread Line.

Each Friday and Saturday the Thrift Shop has a food sale, always marked a "gingerbread line."

"We have potato salad, baked beans, cup cakes, cookies, crullers, pies, all kinds of candy, meat pies, ginger bread," said Mrs. Graham. "The men in the neighborhood form in line every single food sale day, demanding ginger bread."

"Everybody is our customer, from the highest to the lowest. And nothing is more touching than the generosity of people in the humbler walks of life to those less fortunate than they.

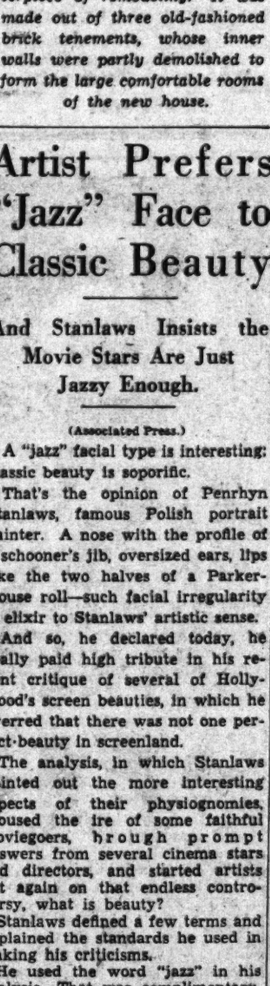
"The other day, a woman with a market basket on her arm came in and bought an outfit for a newborn baby who couldn't leave the hospital until someone got it clothing. There is a woman from the country I have known to come in time and again and clear off a whole table of children's clothing, to give to needy children living in the country near her. Those things occur all the time.

"And Mrs. Graham is the mother confessor to many of our customers," smiled a volunteer worker, turning aside from the cataloguing of piled-up donations.

Even as she spoke, a telephone query was brought to her, as to how a child could be entered in the Children's Country Home, one of five organizations the Thrift Shop helps support. Others are Washington's Children's Welfare Society, the Children's Hospital, the Prenatal Clinic at Columbia Hospital, and the Junior League children's charities.

"The money is not necessarily spent for food and clothing, but for any necessity that may arise from a sand box at the Children's Country Home to a new bathtub in the Children's Hospital," Mrs. Graham said.

The Thrift Shop was started six years ago by Mrs. John Allan Dougherty.



MRS. JEAN DE LATTRE-SEGUY is the charming hostess of a Georgetown home that is a masterpiece of remodeling. It was made out of three old-fashioned brick tenements, whose inner walls were partly demolished to form the large comfortable rooms of the new house.

Artist Prefers "Jazz" Face to Classic Beauty

(Associated Press.)

That's the opinion of Penrhyn Stanlaws, famous Polish portrait painter. A nose with the profile of a schooner's jib, oversized ears, lips like the two halves of a Parker-House roll—such facial irregularity is elixir to Stanlaws' artistic sense.

And so, he declared today, he really paid high tribute in his recent critique of several of Hollywood's screen beauties, in which he averred that there was not one perfect beauty in screenland.

The analysis, in which Stanlaws pointed out the more interesting aspects of their physiognomies, aroused the ire of some faithful moviegoers, brough prompt answers from several cinema stars and directors, and started artists out again on that endless controversy, what is beauty?

Stanlaws defined a few terms and explained the standards he used in making his criticisms.

He used the word "jazz" in his analysis. That was complimentary, he insisted.

"The ancient Greek sculptors created classicism," said Stanlaws. "Classicism is cold and comfortless. The idea of such perfect features explodes when you consider what would be the result if you took a perfect nose two sizes too large and put it on the face of your best friend."

The artists of the 90's began to play with features, he continued, creating a harmony of their own. Hence, the "Gibson girl"—a vital beauty, not an echo of something that had perished 2,000 years before.

Although the Gibson girl became the accepted standard of American beauty, said Stanlaws, she, too, died. She was still a bit too classic, somewhat "cold" and "snooty."

"So we changed her quite a bit," he said, "giving her a boyish form and a great deal of 'it.' We have, in fact, added a little jazz to the facial symphony.

"It is from these modern standards of beauty that I judged the screen actresses."

Particularly, he wants to reassure that fan who wrote him and charged he was just an old iconoclast—"real mean," she had put it.

Stanlaws hopes she will continue going to the movies and seeing out-of-place noses—not to the museum where among the statuary you'll find enough classic beauty to put you to sleep.

Paris Society Has the 'Blues' —In Costume

Most Prominent Women Select Blue Gowns for Smart Soirees.

Paris (AP).—Fashion has "the blues" these evenings, though the effect is far from sad.

American and English women who are numbered among the smartest women here are wearing frocks in every conceivable shade of blue to dinners and evening galas. Pale moonlight blue, the soft lavender tint of pervenche, brilliant royal blue, navy and the deep tint of midnight blue appear at the smartest soirees.

Mme. Jacques Balsan, the former Consuelo Vanderbilt, and Mrs. John Marriott, daughter of Otto Kahn, both wear Molyneux frocks of similar cut in royal blue chiffon, designed on slender lines with a cape effect over the arms.

Lady Louis Mountbatten also likes the soft blue lavender tint. She wears a Molyneux frock of pervenche blue and silver brocade, with a little cape of the same material having two soft, yellow irises perched on the shoulder.

Lady Castlerosse has one of the most striking blue frocks seen this season. It is made of midnight blue velvet and when she wears it, Lady Castlerosse drapes over her shoulders a little cape of coque feathers, shading from pale blue to midnight.

Blue accessories appear with most of these blue frocks. When the gown is made of crepe or velvet, long gloves in the same fabric often are worn. Women put them on and take them off many times an evening, toying with them as they used to with the big chiffon handkerchiefs in vogue several years ago.

Bags appear in the same soft hues. Envelopes or flat pouches of velvet or brocade are the favorites. Many of them are finished with a jeweled clasp or mounting.

Evening sandals are often made of the same fabric as the frock.

What Today Means

"Sagittarius."

If December 2 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:30 a. m. to 12:45 p. m., from 3:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 9 to 9:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9 a. m. and from 5:40 to 7 p. m.

Influences operating on this date will seem to lead you in the right path; be guided by your intuition and if you have any hunches, play them. Surface appearances will tend to be misleading. Some past mistake may crop up on this date and cause difficulty in the home, but if you maintain your composure you will be able to clear yourself and put a satisfactory light on the matter.

If December 2 is the date of your birth, you are probably not a person who works terribly hard, but you seem to know when and where to get in your licks so that they will count the most. People look on you as working fitfully, but you do not believe in doing more than you have to and only when you have to. You are inclined to be a bit moody, but you never let your moods or emotions interfere with your work when it has to be done. You are conscientious about your work, you set a fairly high standard and you keep your work up to it. You are not one who enjoys physical work of any kind and whenever you have to, you will go to any lengths to avoid it. Your labors in life will be largely mental; ideas seem to come to you just when you need them. You are always there in a pinch.

Born on December 2, you are an easy going sort of person. You are the type who will say to a visitor, "Whenever you have nothing to do, come in and do it with me." But you are not lazy, and at critical moments you are most business-like and will sacrifice all personal pleasures for the work at hand. In your home, you try to avoid rush; you do not like to live by schedule, but at the same time you avoid bedlam. If you have children you enjoy being one of them; you take part in their games and have a grand time with all young people. You will not be unhappy.

Trio of Brick Tenements Make a Delightful Mansion

Mr. and Mrs. De Lattre-Seguy Worked the Miracle of Remodeling to Arrive at Their Present Georgetown Dwelling.

Living in one house is all very well. But how would you like to live in three houses at the same time?

That is what Mr. and Mrs. Jean DeLattre-Seguy are doing. Their home at 3303 Volta place has been made by joining three antique brick tenements and adding large quantities of good taste, white paint, and gardening, plus that famous Georgetown atmosphere.

The "before and after" pictures of the DeLattre-Seguy house show a miracle wrought with really unpromising material. The little row of houses were of the humblest sort. The present living room occupies the space once taken up by an old-fashioned saloon, Mrs. DeLattre-Seguy says with some amusement.

The beginning of this making of a new home resembled a wrecking operation. Useless partitions and stairways, worn-out flooring, a clutter of sheds—all had to be removed. When it was over the place looked like a corner of one of those views showing what a Big Bertha did to a French village.

Three Floor Levels.

Then came the checking up of the assets. First, each house was a bit higher or lower than its neighbour This was fine, giving three floor levels. Between two of the houses was one of those old arched passageways. This was made the entrance of the new house and its brick flagging was left undisturbed to form flooring for the entrance hall. One door was left in place to form an entrance to the kitchen directly from the street, thus making it unnecessary for the grocer's boy and his ilk to traipse through the garden.

The rambling nature of the house permits the dining room, living room, entrance hall and library all to circle about the garden, which thus easily becomes just another room in the summer. The DeLattre-Seguys are fond of entertaining and the openness of this first-floor arrangement is ideal for both garden parties and dancing.

Each of the three little houses contributed its bit to the first floor. One provided the garage and kitchen. Another formed the dining room and entrance hall. Another went to the living room. Upstairs are four bedrooms, two bathrooms and one extra lavatory.

Windows Were High.

The windows of the old houses were placed somewhat higher than is usual. This was not thought of as an asset at first. But it developed that they were most valuable when it came to the convenient placing of furniture. Either a chest of drawers or a Chesterfield could easily be placed under a window with charming effect. If a chest of drawers, the top was the ideal position for a piece of opalescent glass. If a Chesterfield, the light fell directly across the shoulder for easy reading.

The closets, cupboards and shelves of the house are a subject for unrestrained enthusiasm. Not one inch of space has been left idle. There are little closets, big closets, middle-sized closets at every turn. The same thought goes for shelves from the shelf-lined kitchen to the shelf topping every radiator and the little triangular window shelves planned to hold flowers and plants. But the climax is found in an upstairs hall, where high shelves over the door are used to hold the overflow of books from the library. In Mrs. Lattre-Seguy's room the ample closet is centered with a series of shelves which hold hats, while hanging space for frocks is provided on either side.

French Furniture.

The passion for early Americana has not invaded the home. Mrs. De Lattre-Seguy says frankly that she can't bear their general stiffness, although she has a few colonial furnishings. The living room is an easy and happy combination of French, Victorian and modern furniture, with an early American piece or two. Over the mantel is an enchanting old painting of a tiny French girl, a remote ancestress of Mr. DeLattre-Seguy. Its colors are misted and darkened by time, but the tiny face looks out like a little wind flower.

The library is more than a handsome pine paneled room. It is packed with ideas for the home maker. Thus over the mantel is a built-in picture frame of pine ready to hold either a picture or a panel of decorative fabric. There is a built-in gun closet, too, which also comes in for fishing tackle. The wrought iron handles on this closet are in fruit and game patterns and were salvaged from an old house. Incidentally, the De Lattre-Seguys prefer to call the library the "book room," a pretty and simple name.

In the dining room we again find an excellent combination of furniture periods. The walls are a good Dutch blue over a wainscoting of dark wood. The table is walnut and French provincial in style. There is a Pennsylvania Dutch corner cupboard, very roomy and quaint. The chairs are also Pennsylvania Dutch and enchanting in their worn patterning of dark red and gold. A Victorian server and a series of very detailed old-fashioned fruit prints also figure in the picture.

Garden in Three Parts.

The garden is divided in three parts. First, the "outdoor living room," a stretch of lawn bordered with tall flowering shrubbery. Here too, during the summer are some avocado plants which are transferred into the house in the winter. Then there is the bricked terrace at the front, cool and restful, with its ivy-covered wall and borders of August lilies. Lombardy poplars, planted close together, form a high bank of greenery, along the wall. Third comes the kitchen garden, just a tiny place inclosed with lattice work, but very convenient.

The street side of the garden is inclosed with a high wall with an arched gateway and heavy nail-studded wooden door. Both the house and wall were given a coat of whitewash of which just enough has come off to give a glimpse of the rose-red-bricks beneath.

The original transformation of the old houses into a modern home was effected by Mrs. Stoddard Hoffman, of New York, who later leased it to Col. and Mrs. John Hodges before it was taken over by Mr. and Mrs. DeLattre-Seguy.

Kentucky Team Much Married, And Likes It

Murray, Ky., Dec. 1 (AP).—Wives of students are strictly persona non grata at most colleges, especially to football coaches, but not here at Murray State Teachers College.

Murray's team, one of the few unbeaten and untied teams, boasts six benedicts among the players who have made it one of the Nation's high-scoring elevens this season.

There's Howard Allen, of Nashville, Tenn., a triple-threat quarter back, one of the best punters in the S. I. A. A.; Norman McKenzie, of Jackson, Tenn., 191-pound center; Bradley Thurman, of Murray, a blocking full back; Howard Moss, of Paducah, Ky., a place-kicking half back; Preston Laster, of Woodland Mills, Tenn., a guard, and Dorsey Wesley, of Flat Rock, Ills., a substitute center.

Every one of them is married, and McKenzie, who was wed in 1929, is the father of a son, Norman, jr., team mascot and special pet of Murray's 1,000 students.

But not a one of the young wives, according to a consensus made public by the college's department of journalism today, will admit she was attracted to her husband solely by gridiron clamor.

Several of them admit they worry like the average mother does about the chances of injury. Mrs. Wesley, a Paducah girl, expresses their feelings with, "I enjoy a football game, but I never breathe easily until I'm sure he's safe after every play."

Mrs. McKenzie, who comes from Jackson, Tenn., and Mrs. Thurman, formerly of Paducah, say they never worry about possible injuries.

Mrs. Allen, a New Orleans girl, and Mrs. Laster, from Union City, Tenn., are coeds; Mrs. Wesley, a Murray graduate, is teaching school in Crawford County, Ill.; Mrs. McKenzie is secretary of the Murray Training School, and Mrs. Thurman and Mrs. Moss, the latter a Paducah girl, spend their time keeping house.

"SHOULD LADIES BEHAVE?" Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the play, "The Vinegar Tree," by Paul Osborn, adapted to the screen by Bella and Samuel Spewack, starring Lionel Barrymore and Alice Brady, with Katharine Alexander, Conway Tearle, Mary Carlisle, William Janney and Halliwell Hobbes. Directed by Harry Beaumont. Reviewed Friday morning.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Mr. Lionel Barrymore and Miss Alice Brady evidently entertain definite aspirations to become known, respectively, as the cinema's dourest character actor and most addlepated comedienne.

One reaches this conclusion by observing, in "Should Ladies Behave?" that Mr. Barrymore perpetuates much of the gruff uncouthness of "Rasputin" and "Night Flight" and Miss Brady only slightly modifies the garrulous irresponsibility of "When Ladies Meet" and the reluctant devotion of "Broadway to Hollywood."

The exaggerated qualities of rancor and innocent muddling which they reveal, however, are rather better adapted to the comic and dramatic needs of their present vehicle than they have ever been before to other uses. They fit perfectly and do much to make of this sophisticated and exciting farce one of the season's most amusing excuses for frivolous and inconsequential pastiming.

On Side of Discretion.

This sprightly adaptation of Paul Osborn's successful stage comedy of "The Vinegar Tree" loses nothing of the original's pungent humor while divesting the lines and situations of something of their earlier overtones of sex. "Should Ladies Behave?" is a deftly provocative treatise upon love's fruitless striving to bridge the years between youth and old age that never oversteps the bounds of discretion and conventional behavior. There are, to be sure, moments of slightly startling implication and occasional situations that threaten to lead a little beyond the pale, but these never quite come off.

Theatergoers of the Capital are not unfamiliar with the fable unfolded in "The Vinegar Tree"—the laughable and at times plaintive tale of a comparatively young wife married to an elderly and crotchety husband whose life is wrapped up, and has been for years, in his garden and the happiness of his daughter; the wife's confusion as to the identity of an ardent lover of her romantic years and the intrusion of a middle-aged artist and his inamorata into the domestic tranquility of a house divided against itself until the artist's attempted elopement with the daughter shocks them all into a state of comparative sanity and sense.

Packed With Humor.

The lines are heavily barbed with a caustic and biting wit and many acute situations are precipitated by the infinite capacity of the wife and mother to do and say the wrong thing at precisely the right time to do the most damage to the prospects of happiness of all concerned.

This is the hoity-toity brand of farcical romanticism to which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have dedicated the talents of one of their most judiciously chosen casts. Mr. Barrymore and Miss Brady, as has perhaps been intimated, carry the major burden of the play as the warring parents of the youthful and rapidly soaring Mary Carlisle, who here assumes her most important task before the cameras and microphones and comes away with a charming performance to her credit. Conway Tearle and Katharine Alexander, a newcomer to the screen of whom the last has not been heard, are ideally cast as the clandestine lovers and William Janney capably assumes the role of Miss Carlisle's futile and badly mussed boyhood sweetheart. Halliwell Hobbes, reliable English actor, appears as the hussar-coated butler in whose eyes the entire household has gone nuts.

An Ace Revue.

The superlative excellence of "Should Ladies Behave?" is completely matched on the stage by Billy Rose's 1933 edition of his "Crazy Quilt" revue. A real revue this, tailored to the requirements of abridged running time, yet packed with adroit diversion provided by a small but conspicuously competent group of artists.

Chief interest among these centers in Anita Page, making her first excursion out of the films into the enchanted realm behind the footlights. Miss Page is an even lovelier young blonde than the films would lead one to believe. Gorgeously costumed, she assists in a number of the skits and makes an announcement or two, but is not on stage half enough to satisfy an audience's admiration of her beauty.

Charles King, associated with Miss Page in "Broadway Melody," first of the musical films, is the revue's mainstay in song and the needed business of ceremony mastering. He does several old numbers and the best of the new. Bulwarking his efforts on the comedy side are Smith and Dale, those utterly nonsensical dialecticians who present three of their familiar skits—"The Last National Bank," done here in the recent "Lambs' Gambol" at the National; "Dr. Kronkite" and "Hungarian Goulash," from the old days of the Avon Comedy Four.

Eleanor Stops Show.

Eleanor Powell, best of all the tap dancers, runs away with her portions of the frolicking, and Cardini, suavest of the prestidigitators, repeats the baffling success he always scores with his playing cards and lighted cigarettes.

In Her Best Screen Role to Date

In association with Lionel Barrymore, Alice Brady, Katharine Alexander and Conway Tearle, veterans all, the blonde and youthful Mary Carlisle acquits herself with high credit as the ingenuous daughter in "Should Ladies Behave?" the picturization of the comedy, "The Vinegar Tree," currently on view at Loew's Fox Theater. It is her most important assignment as an M-G-M stellar prospect.

"LADY KILLER." Warner Brothers' picturization of Rosalind Keating Shaffer's story, "Finger Man," adapted to the screen by Ben Markson and Lilie Hayward, starring James Cagney, supported by Margaret Lindsay and Mae Clarke. Directed by Roy Del Ruth. Reviewed Friday night by D. L.

This silly little business about movie ushers and gangsters and movie stars and California sunshine never takes itself any more seriously than the things it is joshing—consequently it's considerable fun.

And Mr. James Cagney as the usher-gangster-movie hero plays with a very nice, brisk comedy sense that makes the fun funnier, and practically continuous, even when the plot seems hopelessly lost.

Fired from his job as a super-regimentized movie usher and frisked by a confidence gang, Dan Quigley joins the gang and boosts its confidence and its bankroll until its members are stepping out in high gang society—larceny and eventually, to Dan's horror, murder.

Blackmail and Ruin.

Running away from the law, Dan runs smack into the movies and romance, getting to the Hollywood top only to have the dear old gang blow into town, with blackmail to ruin his carer and the old moll to ruin his romance. Sooooo!

Cagney is practically the whole show, and a good one, from usher to fiery Italian lover in silk knee britches, and screen poses. Margaret Lindsay is very attractive as his Hollywood sweetheart and Mae Clarke does well enough as the moll, taking her body blows from the fierce Mr. Quigley with poise and fortitude.

Except for its so-called headliner, the stage show is entertaining. The Four Ortons with their exceptional wire-walking, and their pet goose and piglet, open the bill with enthusiasm. Vox and Walter justify their claims to the titles of "King and Queen of Ventriloquism," he by singing a duet with himself and she by crying her heart out as the doll she holds in her arms.

Changing Voices.

As for Gene Austin, the less said the better. His rendition of the grand "Last Roundup" hits a new low as far as this reviewer is concerned, and—but there, maybe he had a cold or something. Candy and Coco, who "assist him," do their best, Candy even letting his voice change right out in public.

A Grantland Rice sportorial about dogs and more dogs features some unbelievable lovely and exciting pictures of pointers at work; Movie Memories includes a glimpse of beloved old John Bunny and Flora Finch, while Graham McN's high-powered newsreel and Freddie Clark's overture conclude a bill which is more fun than it really deserves to be.

"THE WORST WOMAN IN PARIS." Fox picturization of a story by Monta Bell, featuring Benita Hume, Adolphe Menjou, Harvey Stephens and Helen Chandler. Directed by Monta Bell. Reviewed Friday afternoon by W. A. W.

Returning to the business of directing pictures after a long absence, Monta Bell's first offering is almost an all-Bell production. Author, coadaptor and director, Mr. Bell has, in "The Worst Woman in Paris," turned out a better-than-average author-directed picture.

In fact, the worst that one can say about it is that the title quite belies the entertainment offered. The reputation accredited to Peggy Vane is the result of hearsay, notwithstanding Adolphe Ballou's constant attendance upon her. All of which can by no stretch of the imagination justify the "worst woman" accusation.

So innocuous is their association that their interest in each other wanes and they part, Adolphe seeking other diversions and Peggy going to America. Crossing Kansas, her train is wrecked, and, while recuperating from her injuries, Peggy falls in love with John Strong, principal of the Bridgetown Academy for Boys. John, of course, has a charming secretary who secretly loves him.

Live Happily, &c.

As John and Peggy are about to be married, word arrives from Paris that Adolphe has tobogganed to penury. That Mary, the secretary, and John may get married—a consummation Peggy realizes would not be for her, since a reputation is a reputation, no matter how acquired—Peggy returns to Paris, and both couples are finally united and presumably live happily ever after.

Benita Hume in the title role is very good—when in the atmosphere of Paris, right at home with all the bright lights—but in Kansas, well—!

Though not strictly corn-fed, Helen Chandler makes an excellent Mary, and does a commendable job of silently adoring. Harvey Stephens plays John.

For really fine acting, the cast must naturally bow to Adolphe Menjou. Whether the part is beneath him or not—and this one quite suits him—Mr. Menjou always gives a good account of himself, frequently raising a picture from the depths of obscurity. Here, however, no such task is imposed upon him, and he depicts the Parisian playboy to perfection.

The other players of bits of more or less importance include Margaret Seddon, Adele St. Maur, Leonard Carey, Maidel Turner, and George Irving.

"Crook's Tour" reveals an American gangster and his wife in England, seeking a title for their daughter. Douglas Wakefield and Billy Nelson bear the brunt of the work that turns out to be an hilarious satire which is as good as anything Hal Roach has presented. A release of the Paramount News is the only other auxiliary.

RKO-Keith's

"LITTLE WOMEN." RKO-Radio picturization of the novel by Louisa M. Alcott, adapted to the screen by Sarah Y. Mason and Victor Heerman, starring Katharine Hepburn, with Joan Bennett, Frances Dee, Jean Parker, Paul Lukas, Douglass Montgomery, Spring Byington, Edna May Oliver and Henry Stephenson. Directed by George Cukor.

Doing much to restore faith in those simple virtues upon which the soundness of the American social system is based, "Little Women," RKO-Keith's reverent and faithful picturization of Louisa M. Alcott's novel of New England life in the '60s, continues to pack every available inch of space in the RKO-Keith Theater at every performance as it rounds into a second week of record-breaking attendance.

Every element of fascinating and wholesome entertainment is combined in this story of a typical American family's unpretentious pleasures, minor sacrifices and numbing tragedies. Adaptors, cast, director, photographer—everybody connected with the preparation and execution of the picture—have conspired to turn out a masterpiece of authentic reproduction of a remote and picturesque day in the history of American small-town life.

Perfectly Balanced Cast.

Katharine Hepburn, in the pivotal role of Jo March, is no more to be individually credited with the picture's overwhelming success as a popular vehicle for her talents than are Joan Bennett, as Amy; Frances Dee, as Meg; Jean Parker, as Beth; Spring Byington, as Marmee; Paul Lukas, as Prof. Bhaer; Douglass Montgomery, as Laurie; Henry Stephenson, as Mr. Laurence or Edna May Oliver, as Aunt March. All contribute admirably to the rounded perfection of a picture that possesses many merits and no defects.

Augmenting the feature is Walt Disney's "Three Little Pigs," the Technicolor "Silly Symphony" that has taken the country by storm and is now playing its third engagement in the Capital.

The RKO Pathe News is the only other auxiliary of a bill that may not be omitted from any list of entertainments that must be seen.

Palace

"DANCING LADY." M. G. M.'s picturization of James Warner Bellah's novel, adapted to the screen by Allen Rivkin and P. J. Wolfson, starring Joan Crawford and Clark Gable, supported by Franchot Tone, Robert Benchley and Ted Healy. Directed by Robert Z. Leonard. Reviewed second week by D. L.

It deserves not only a second week's showing, which it is getting, but a second seeing.

It sparkles and speeds all of its entertaining way. And it brings back a prettier, happier and better Joan Crawford, a real dancing lady, supported excellently by Clark Gable, playing with undisguised relish, and Franchot Tone, busy putting realism into his romantic moments with the lady.

Follows Unusual Formula.

Something of a rarity, having a plot with incidental music rather than music with an incidental (and all too often) accidental plot, "Dancing Lady" features Joan in exactly the dilemma in which you pictured her when you heard she was to have both Gable and Tone as leading men. Which shall it be? The hard-boiled dance director or the engaging young Park Avenue-ite, and also what about that career?

Here is a simple little problem made difficult, different and diverting by casting and playing, because you'll like both men so much and Joan more than you ever did that sullen-mouthed young tragedienne she has been pretending to be lately.

In addition to the stellar trio, May Robson, Ted Healy and his stooges, Fred Astaire, Robert Benchley, Art Jarrett, and Maynard Holmes (he's junior), perform valiantly. There is also a very neat and nice show within a show, with a particularly lovely merry-go-round number to add to your enjoyment.

The usual subsidiaries complete a bill that deserves to be the hit it is.

U. S. Will Push Fight in Court On Touhy Gang

New Attempt Planned to Convict Group of Kidnaping.

Freeing of members of the Touhy gang of kidnaping charges at St. Paul brought the comment from the Department of Justice yesterday that it will take further action "to protect law-abiding citizens from the menace of this group of criminals."

Proceedings have been started to take the defendants to Chicago to face trial for the kidnaping of Jake "The Barber" Factor, it was stated.

The statement asserted that the not-guilty verdict was returned by a Federal court jury "presumably because of the failure of certain witnesses to reaffirm their previous identifications of the accused." This was believed by many to have been directed at William Hamm, jr., victim of the kidnaping, who displayed unwillingness to testify throughout the trial, which handicapped the prosecution.

"The Department of Justice presented the available evidence and prosecuted with vigor the cases against Roger Touhy, William Sharkey, Gus Shafer and Eddie McFadden, charged with the kidnaping of William Hamm," the statement said. "The case was tried in St. Paul and the jury returned a verdict of not guilty, presumably because of the failure of certain witnesses to reaffirm their previous identifications of the accused.

"However, during the trial, facts developed which indicate beyond doubt that these defendants were and are dangerous law breakers who should not be permitted to remain at large. Both directly and in conjunction with the State authorities, this department will take further action to protect law-abiding citizens from the menace of this group of criminals."

Cleveland 'Romeo' Hunted as Slayer

Sought in Texas Murder of Pretty Widow.

El Paso, Tex., Dec. 1 (AP).—With a murder charge on file at Van Horn against Arthur C Wilson, 28, of Cleveland, as a starting point, authorities tonight redoubled their efforts to solve the slaying of Mrs. Irene de Bolt, attractive 35-year-old Cleveland widow, whose battered body was found near Van Horn last November 7.

The charge against Wilson, described as a "lady's man," was filed today by John W. Penn, assistant district attorney, who said a search for Wilson was under way over a wide area.

Utility Holding Firm Reports Held in Error

Charging that reports on the decision of the Federal Power Commission in the Louisville Hydro-electric plant's valuation case were misleading, John J. O'Brien, president of the Standard Gas & Electric Co. and its subsidiary, Byllesby Engineering & Management Corporation, of New York, yesterday said he would ask a rehearing in the case.

"There have been no simple transfers of funds from one part of the Byllesby structure to another," he said, "and all charges rendered have been for services actually performed in ample measure and with economy to the operating companies."

While the commission has disallowed the $481,000 fee for supervisory service in the Louisville area, O'Brien pointed out that "in rejecting the amount the commission does so with leave to submit appropriate evidence in support of the claim."

These charges covered complete engineering service and the entire organization and supervision of construction, and construction extended over more than two years and required the employment of 1,500 men, he said, adding:

"The Louisville hydroelectric project consists of an 80,000-horsepower power house, placed in operation in 1928, and a dam in the Ohio River, the dam being owned by the Federal Government. Both dam and power house were built by the Byllesby Engineering and Management Corporation as engineers and supervisors of construction. * * * The engineering corporation was the lowest of three bidders for the construction of the Government dam, or about $187,000 under the next lowest bidder. As a result the engineering corporation had charge of the entire project, the total cost of which was about $10,000,000."

Gen. Johnson Returns Loft Blue Eagles

Tips Held Not Included in Minimum Wage to Waitresses.

Acting directly for the first time to restore the Blue Eagle to an employer, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson yesterday authorized the candy and chain restaurant stores of Loft, Inc., to display NRA insignia again, following the company's promise to abide by the President's Reemployment Agreement.

On Wednesday, Gen. Johnson ordered the insignia removed when the District Compliance Board of the NRA advised him that Loft, Inc., had failed to abide by NRA regulations covering pay schedules during November.

Waitresses in the Loft restaurants here were being paid 14½ cents an hour instead of 27 cents, because the management considered itself entitled to count their tips as compensation. The substitute agreement under the P. R. A., pending adoption of a restaurant code, does not permit this.

Officials of Loft, Inc, explained the removal of the Blue Eagle was due to a misunderstanding, and that the management previously had agreed to abide fully by the NRA and the substitute agreement if its petition to have tips counted as part of the waitress' compensation were denied.

This was the first time Gen. Johnson has ordered restoration of NRA insignia to an employer without referring the matter back to a local compliance board. The administrator, however, congratulated Maj. Raymond J. Walter, executive officer of the District Compliance Board, on his handling of the case.

Services Are Held For C. R. Whaley

Retired Real Estate Man Buried in Alexandria.

Funeral services for Carl R. Whaley, 56, retired realty operator, who died Wednesday, were held yesterday at his home, 3203 Porter street northwest. Dr. Charles P. Warner, pastor of St. Alban's Episcopal Church, officiated. Burial was in the Presbyterian Cemetery at Alexandria, Va.

The pallbearers were Henry G. Hanford, Frederick Hewitt, Dr. Malcolm W. Morgan, Col. Robert R. Herndon, W. F. Hummer and Harry R. Stanford.

Joyriders Develop Roadster Dunking

Car Found Partly in Water, Rear Wheels on Wall.

Roadster dunking is the joyriders' latest.

Sergt. O. R. Reese and Private T. Fogarty were patrolling Anacostia Park early yesterday when they found a small roadster partly submerged in the Anacostia River near the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge.

Poised precariously at a 45-degree angle, its radiator and front wheels were under water, while the rear wheels hung on the sea wall. Although the car was discovered at low tide, it bore no watermarks above the radiator.

After an inspection indicated no one had been hurt, the car was towed to the Eleventh Precinct station. Through license plates it was traced to Frank J. DeMarco, 2100 I street northwest, from whom it had been stolen.

D. A. Pine Urged For D. C. Attorney

King Refers Delegation to Cummings.

Appointment of David A. Pine, Washington attorney, as United States Attorney for the District, yesterday was asked by a delegation of Washington lawyers who called on Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee.

Senator King received the delegation, but advised members they should make their recommendations to the office of Attorney General Cummings.

The delegation included People's Counsel Richard B. Keech, Judge John W. Price, H. Prescott Gatley, James S. Easby-Smith, Abram F. Myers and Leslie Garnett.

Nation's Capital Experiences First Day of Free Universal Street Car Transfer

C. W. A. Rolls Here Doubled; Get Pay Today

Sight "Might Have Opened Al Smith's Eyes," Remarks Allen.

The District C. W. A. pay roll today will be more than double the total of last Saturday, first pay day under the civil works employment program.

More than 14,600 persons will receive $137,725.43 for the second week and the third week will show a yet larger roll.

The number of persons assigned to Civil Works Administration jobs is mounting as projects are approved, and registered applicants are assigned.

The Census Bureau called for 100 additional workers yesterday. The public librarian put in a requisition for 37 other white-collar workers for special work.

The rush to approve projects which marked the first days of the administration has been slowed and Capt. Howard F. Clark, assistant Engineer Commissioner, executive officer of the Works Administration, is looking over each project carefully. Capt. Clark believes emphasis should be placed on the character of the work proposed and the question of supplying jobs should be made a secondary question, now that the rush of taking over relief workers has been largely accomplished.

District executives are preparing other projects. Commissioner George E. Allen, under whose direct supervision the CWA functioning falls, disagreed with former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, of New York, on the value of the program.

"If," Mr. Allen said, "Mr. Smith or any one else had been with me when these men and women received their first pay checks it might have opened his eyes as to what the Civil Works Administration is actually doing. I know the Civil Works Administration is meeting an immediate unemployment situation which had to be met."

Gen. Winship Quits Brown Takes Post

Judge Advocate General Ends 30-Year Service.

At the end of 30 years' distinguished service, Judge Advocate General Blanton Winship cleaned off his desk yesterday and retired from the Army to the rank of private citizen, the Associated Press said.

The leave-taking was automatic under the act of Congress which retires men at the end of the month in which they become 64 years old. Gen. Winship celebrated his sixty-fourth birthday anniversary November 26.

Col. Arthur W. Brown succeeded to the post.

Hopkins Names 4 C. W. A. Assistants

Harry L. Hopkins, Civil Works administrator, who has been without an official staff in the civil works organization since it began hiring the unemployed, yesterday announced appointment of officials of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration as his aids.

Corrington Gill, Jacob Baker and Bruce McClure will be assistant administrators of civil works.

Free Transfers, Inaugurated With Merger, Provide 90 Minutes of Riding on Bus and Trolley Lines in City.

"The transfers are free."

Setting down her bundle, she opened up her purse and put the penny back and at the same time brought out a pair of spectacles. She scrutinized the transfer and then returned the spectacles to the bag with an air of distrust.

But the doubt was dispelled a few minutes later when the slip gave her passage on another car—even if it was of a different color.

New System Inaugurated.

Thus was ushered in the new universal transfer system, received with surprise and doubt, but proved with use. Thousands of pennies went back into pockets.

Although it is impossible to ride ejernally for one fare, residents yesterday found that the free universal transfer made a lot of riding.

"But it came 20 years too late," said the veteran motorman. "It should have happened back in the old days when father, mother and the children rode to the end of the Georgia avenue line for a Sunday afternoon outing.

"Think what they could do now. Board the car at Congress Heights and get a transfer at Eighth and G streets southeast, ride to Eighteenth and Columbia road, change to the Mount Pleasant line and go to Dupont Circle, change there and ride to the District line on the Glen Echo line, all for one fare and one transfer."

90 Minutes Is Limit.

The old-timer neglected to say that time might be called before the expiration of such a journey, for there is one limit to the universal transfer—a maximum time of 90 minutes.

The merger of the lines went into effect at midnight Thursday, despite the fact that green cars still follow the old green lines and the old companys' names, the Washington Electric Co. and the Capital Traction Co., are still on the cars.

Transfers at 186 points are now free. There are still some transfer charges between buses and street cars—but even in these cases the transfers are free when a 10-cent cash fare is paid.

Conductors who yesterday worked the new transfer idea reported they got along well. The new system is simple and makes less work for them, they said, as they no longer have to make change for the penny transfers.

Fearless Foes Carry War On Starlings to New Sector

Lanham and His Boys Follow Birds to Theater Section.

The Battle of the Bird shifted to the white light sector last night when Clifford Lanham and his CWA boys pushed their relentless drive against starlings into F street.

Claiming a Pennsylvania avenue victory over the worried birds, as the result of skirmishes at and around the District Building Tuesday and Wednesday nights, Lanham last night resumed the campaign following a Thanksgiving lay-off.

"Thursday night," said the chief of the starling nuisance abatement committee, "I walked from the Capitol to the District Building and didn't see a starling. We're getting results all right."

In contrast to the District Building encounters, where pebble-filled cans and poles were used to prevent starlings from roosting in trees and streams of water were poured against the structure's sides to dislodge them, the F street battle was fought with telephone books. From the roof of practically every building on the north side, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, starling baiters dangled the directories from 50-foot ropes.

Then, as a strategic move, firemen turned their hose on the District Building to prevent the evicted birds from seeking refuge there.

Altogether 100 men, under Lanham's direction, some from his regular force and the remainder enlisted from civil works rolls, took part in last night's offensive. Those who were not assigned to the District Building or the Fox Theater and other F street structures shook tin cans and waved poles in trees at various starling-infested areas in lower Pennsylvania avenue.

Showing increasing enthusiasm over his novel responsibility, the elderly Mr. Lanham, who suffered a fractured back in an auto accident a year and a half ago and still wears a brace, played "I Spy" with his arch-enemies yesterday and returned with valuable information. During the day, he reported, they feed in droves near Blue Plains. He said he saw countless thousands flying above the Potomac near the Home for the Aged.

1,226 Hunting Licenses Mark Alexandria Gain

Elliott F. Hoffman, clerk of the Corporation Court, Alexandria, issued 1,226 hunting licenses in November, an increase of 77 over last November. The licenses have yielded the State $2,478.50 this year. There were 706 county licenses, 503 State licenses and 17 nonresident licenses.

The clerk also collected for the State $545.78 from marriage licenses, suits, wills and deeds.

Plan for More Traffic Lights Here Approved

Constitution Avenue and Other Streets Listed by Van Duzer.

A number of new traffic lights, recommended by Traffic Director W. A. Van Duzer, were approved yesterday by the District Commissioners.

Installation of the lights will cost $7,889, Mr. Van Duzer estimated from figures given by the Potomac Electric Power Co., with 15 per cent added to the actual cost of installation. Mr. Van Duzer did not give the total cost of the new lights, all parts of which are to be supplied the company by the District.

The lights will be installed on Constitution avenue northwest at Sixth, Seventh, Ninth, Tenth, Twelfth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets; Thirteenth street northwest at M and N streets; on Fourteenth street southwest at South Park drive and D street.

Some lights already installed are to be changed from the outmoded scheme under which they were installed, and will be made "progressive" signals. These include lights at Fourteenth street northwest and North Park drive, B street, and Water street.

Another recommendation by Mr. Van Duzer, approved by the Commissioners, was aimed at smoky and partially opaque windshields of automobiles. None but clear windshields are to be permitted under the new regulations.

Girl Snatches Purse, Watch From Woman

A girl robber last night snatched a purse containing $6 in cash and a watch valued at $100 from Miss Mary Kearney, of 2715 Q street northwest on the Dumbarton Bridge, according to a police report.

The girl was said to be about 18 years old and colored.

Unlocked Safe Robbed.

An envelope containing $85 was taken from an unlocked safe in a tire store at Third and B streets southwest yesterday, William A. Norris, manager, reported to police.

King Declines To Conduct Watson Quiz

Senator Without Power to Act on Charges, He Asserts.

Mrs. Jenckes Told Own Committee Could Investigate.

Chairman William H. King, of the Senate District Committee, said last night he has no authority to appoint a subcommittee to investigate the conduct of Fire Chief George S. Watson while Congress is in recess.

In a letter to Representative Virginia E. Jenckes, Senator King suggested that a House District subcommittee conduct the inquiry, if an investigation is desired before Congress reconvenes.

Meanwhile Watson, charged with "czarism" and "discrimination" by Paul E. Jamieson, attorney for the City Fire Fighters Association, issued a blanket order to the locals of all Fire Department units to stop circulation of any petitions pledging support to him or his administration.

King Letter Made Public.

Battalion Chiefs T. B. Stanton and A. Haight, reported to have started circulation of such petitions, were ordered by Watson to stop it at once. Jamieson had threatened earlier to ask District officials to investigate circulation of the petitions, of which Watson said he had no prior knowledge.

Senator King's letter to Mrs. Jenckes was in reply to her request for both Senate and District committee investigation into charges against Watson, or a joint inquiry by both bodies.

"May I say that the committee on the District of Columbia of the Senate has no subcommittee or special committee authorized to examine into the matters to which you refer, nor have I any authority to appoint a subcommittee for that purpose," he wrote.

Watson's Reply Prepared.

"In view of the fact that the House has a subcommittee, of which you are a member, which is authorized to make the investigation referred to, it occurs to me that your subcommittee might take such course in the matter as it deemed advisable.

"In the event that no investigation is made by your subcommittee prior to the meeting of Congress, I shall, as soon as there is a meeting of the Committee on the District of Columbia of the Senate, bring your letter to the attention of the committee."

Chief Watson has prepared his reply to the charges transmitted through Mrs. Jenckes, and will submit it through the District Commissioners.

$8,300 Naval Contract Given Washington Firm

Bahan & Wright, of Washington, were awarded a Navy Department contract yesterday to make storehouse repairs at the naval proving ground at Dahlgren, Va., at a cost of $8,300.

A painting contract at the naval powder factory at Indianhead, Md., went to the Maryland Painting Co., of Baltimore, for $1,075. A repair contract at Indianhead was awarded to Schaeffer & Co., of Philadelphia, for $13,681.

Just an Error

U. S. Cuts Pay by Mistake and Sticks to It.

The pay of clerks in third-class postoffices, reduced 10 per cent through a "misapprehension," can not be raised even though a "mistake" was made in imposing the cut, Comptroller General McCarl ruled yesterday.

Only pay cuts which were imposed for disciplinary action can be eliminated under the economy act, McCarl pointed out. If it desired to give the clerks more money, he informed the Postoffice Department, their hours can be lengthened.

The 10 per cent cut was made last July. "Through a miscalculation, we believed it necessary to make this reduction to stay within our appropriation," the Department wrote. "Later we found a mistake had been made." The cut was eliminated on October 1. This raise would not exceed the Department's appropriation.

The Bureau of Plant Industry will employ 500 men at once on CWA jobs in a campaign to combat the Dutch Elm disease which is threatening American elm trees.

An area of 1,440 square miles in New Jersey and New York around New York City is infected. Two-fifths of the control work will be done in New York, a like amount in New Jersey, and the remainder in Indiana, Tennessee, Virginia, Kentucky, Ohio, Missouri and Illinois.

Federal Forum Told 20% Free Of Dependents

Average Family Income Found Below $2,000, Says Statistician.

One-fifth of all Government employes in Washington have no immediate dependents, Dr. Faith Williams, of the Bureau of Home Economics, last night told the new Forum of Government Employes at the Interior Department Auditorium.

Dr. Williams, whose workers have collected 485 detailed schedules of comparative expenses in 1928 and 1933 in connection with a cost of living survey being made by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, said that 104 families are receiving from $1,000 to $1,500 a year, 245 from $1,500 to $2,000, and 105 from $3,000 to $4,000.

Dr. Isador Lubin, chief of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, expressed the opinion that the cost of living should not be the only factor considered in establishing Government wage levels.

Dr. Lubin explained the method of conducting the cost of living survey, and Dr. Williams added that it is one of the most comprehensive yet undertaken in any city.

The forum did not complete its permanent organization last night. Another meeting will be held within a few week to accomplish this purpose.

Midwest Captures 4 Places, East 2, on 1933 All-American Team

Buckler Gets Half Back Position

Warburton, Lund, Sauer Complete Associated Press' Back Field.

Notre Dame First Time in Five Seasons Fails to Gain Place.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (AP).—In a terrific battle of ballots and ballyhoo, for the fifth successive year, the balance of All-American power in college football ranks has been captured by the Middle West.

Gridiron products of the great American midlands capture four of the eleven positions in the all-star lineup named by the Nation's experts in the ninth annual Associated Press consensus selections.

Three positions on the big team go to the Far West. The East and the South, although they produced the only major undefeated and untied teams of 1933, have to be satisfied with two places each.

The Mid-West can thank the remarkable all-around strength of the Big Ten and its neighboring conference, the Big Six, for the distinction of keeping the All-American argument under control in a season featured by the sharp and startling decline of Notre Dame. This year is the first in five successive campaigns that the Fighting Irish have not contributed one or more players to the all-star eleven. Their only consolation is the naming of Hugh Devore at end on the third team.

Little to Choose.

Taking the All-America squad as a whole, consisting of 33 players, the Far West enjoys a slight margin, with ten players named, as compared with nine for the Middle West, eight for the East and six for the South, but there was very little to choose in the voting for most of the positions. In fact the majority of contests for places were so close that on paper, at least, many might well figure that the second or third string line-up possesses enough ability and strength to wallop the All-America itself.

On their performances over the stretch of a sensational season, it might have been possible to name four different All-America backs every other week. However, the final weight of evidence turned the scales in favor of "Cotton" Warburton, of Southern California, at quarter back, "Pug" Lund, of Minnesota, and Jack Buckler, of Army, at half back positions, with Nebraska's mighty George Henry Sauer in the full back role.

Feathers Stands Out in Dixie.

Many Southern enthusiasts will fail to understand how so spectacular an all-around back as Beattie Feathers of Tennessee could be left off the first team by the Nation's critics. In the Big Ten, few will admit there is a superior to Duane Purvis of Purdue. The East has seen no better quarterback than Army's versatile Paul Johnson. Similarly, Pacific Northwest experts think no All-America team is entirely satisfactory without Mike Mukulak of Oregon or Norman (Red) Franklin of Orgeon State in the starting line-up.

On redirect examination, however, after all the rebuttals are in, it appears difficult to dislodge any of the first string quartet. Even in Southern California's one setback, Warburton was an outstanding star and the midget Trojan quarterback

Georgia Bulldogs To Face Trojans

Los Angeles, Dec. 1 (AP).—The University of Georgia, here for a football game with the University of Southern California tomorrow, was told in two words by unofficial scouts just the right system to employ in the game.

The last time the Red and Black team from Georgia invaded Los Angeles it bumped into a red-hot Southern California outfit and the game was turned into a 60 to 0 rout. Nothing of the kind is expected in tomorrow's contest.

Judgment for $3,500 Lost by Vines Family

Los Angeles, Dec. 1 (AP).—Injured when struck August 22, 1932, by a motor car owned by Ellsworth Vines, jr., tennis champion, and driven by George Vines, his young brother, John Frank Albright today won a judgment for $3,500 against the two and their mother, Mrs. Caroline L. Vines.

The judgment was ordered by Superior Judge C. L. Bogue, in whose court Albright had sued for $30,000. Albright said he suffered fractured bones in the accident.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 1 (AP). The fading breath of another football season blew tonight on the embers of a rivalry that was old when grandfather was young. It fanned into glowing, one-day life again the famed conflict of Princeton and Yale, 60 years old at their fifty-seventh meeting in the huge Yale Bowl tomorrow.

Since 1873, the Tigers have been coming to New England and the Elis have been going down to New Jersey year after year with only one break during the World War, and their followers have come along with them. There have been good teams and bad, years where one team outclassed the other on paper, as the high-kiting sophomores of Princeton, unbeaten, scored upon only once, do this battered Yale eleven, walloped by Army and Harvard, beaten by Georgia.

But all this makes no difference, either to players of the other days, the graduates who make this their annual rendezvous, or the athletes who meet tomorrow where paper predictions don't count, and the intenseness of historic rivalry makes all things even.

Hotels were crowded, as usual, the lobbies filled with the howls of old friends meeting again. There were lights everywhere; excitement, but no wise Princeton man took the odds that made his team a 6½-to-1 favorite.

Winding up the 1933 season, sharing only with Army and Notre Dame in New York the major honors of the day, the game seemed certain to attract a crowd of almost 50,000 to the huge bowl, far less than capacity, but considered unusual under the circumstances. Perfect weather conditions are promised, clear and cold.

Coach Wallace Wade and a full squad of athletes arrived by train this morning, retired to a residential section hotel and later held a final drill this afternoon. Wade said his team was in good shape, with the exception of Laney, a back, who definitely is out with injuries.

First Duke Eleven.

Several times in past years Wade has brought a team with championship aspirations to face Georgia Tech, but this is the first time his eleven has fought here since he left Alabama for Duke.

Southeastern fans always liked the play of Wade's old power clubs at Alabama and many will flock to the park tomorrow to see his latest creation.

Quarter Back Roberts, Tackle Williams and Half Back Martin were numbered on Tech's hospital list, but it is probable that all will see action.

Several special trains will arrive tomorrow from Durham and other points in North Carolina with thousands of Blue Devil supporters.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (AP).—A capacity crowd of 78,000 is expected to jam the Yankee Stadium tomorrow to find out whether there is any real answer to the 1933 riddle—what's wrong with Notre Dame—or whether the fighting Irish will prove simply the final stepping stone to an unbeaten season for West Point's Cadets.

Because it is the last and biggest chance for Notre Dame to pull something out of the football wreckage, in addition to being the ideal spot for the underdog to come through, expert opinion tonight carefully weighed the prospect of an upset. Army, nevertheless, ruled a 9-to-5 favorite and, on the basis of comparative records, figured to win handily from a team that has been struggling all season to find the right combination.

Sell-Out Anticipated.

Army officials anticipated a sell-out, with less than 2,000 tickets left today and the demand for these increasing rapidly. They frustrated the activities of speculators by putting the remaining pasteboards on public sale. The scalpers were asking $10 to $15 for "choice" seats, but quickly trimmed the scale when Army set up headquarters in a Broadway hotel.

Cloudy but moderate weather is forecast for the game, scheduled to start at 1:30 p. m. The Cadet Corps will be on hand from West Point to cheer the Army's drive for an unbeaten record.

A notable assemblage of onlookers also will witness what promises to be a colorful and exciting climax to the Eastern gridiron campaign.

The possibility that Army, if victorious, may consider an invitation to represent the East in the annual Rose Bowl game on New Year's Day at Pasadena, Calif., adds unusual interest to the outcome. It is still questionable whether West Point policy will permit such a trip; even if the invitation is forthcoming, but the Cadets are no less anxious on that account to put a triumphant touch to one of the best seasons in Army history.

Army Regulars Ready.

Youthful Lieut. "Gar" Davidson, finishing his first year as head coach, has the Army regulars back in top shape and intact for the game, with several innovations planned in an attack featuring Paul Johnson, versatile quarter back, and Jack Buckler, the triple-threat all-American half back. No team this year has stopped these rover boys, who hope to combine a passing and running attack with convincing effect.

Except for the big full back star, Don Elser, whose knee injury is expected to keep him out of the game entirely, Notre Dame will have its full strength. The team arrived from South Bend this morning, remained in the suburbs and rehearsed the strategy of 1933.

The probable starting line-ups:

McCleary Banned; Renick Is Cleared

Racing Commission Rules on Jockey Cases.

Baltimore, Dec. 1 (AP).—The license of Jockey Joseph McCleary was revoked by the Maryland Racing Commission today after he had appeared before the body to tell that he had given one of his mounts at Bowie an "easy ride" under instructions from an outsider.

McCleary did not name the "outsider," and Jervis Spencer, jr., chairman of the commission, said "we acted accordingly." The action affects McCleary's status at all major tracks.

The jockey was called before the commission for his ride of Don Pedro, which finished far back in a field of nine in the Bowie meet. Thursday, with Lee Humphries up. Don Pedro ran a winning race.

The commission decided to give Jockey Sammy Renick another chance, despite what Chairman Spencer called a "rotten record," and lifted the suspension on Renick which had been placed during the Bowie meet after his ride on Don Guzman.

GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY adds the final notation to its 1933 football record this afternoon at Griffith Stadium, where it encounters the powerful Jayhawks of Kansas U. in its second annual home-coming game. A crowd of 15,000 is expected to see the intersectional game, thereby setting a new yearly attendance record for District football.

Although crippled by injuries that may cause several changes in the starting line-up, the Colonials are confident of repelling the invaders to climax their season in a burst of glory. Kansas, however, is a 7-5 favorite.

George Washington will take the field with Ben Plotnicki at quarter back, Vonder Bruegge or Finis Parrish and "Tuffy" Leemans half backs, Bomba, full back; Benefield and Bill Parrish, ends; Deming and Clark, tackles; Morrison and Hickman, guards and Rathjen, center. A leg injury may keep Finis Parrish out of the starting line-up, but he is assured of playing at least part of the game.

Chris Doose tops a list of casualties that leave G. W. woefully weak in reserve talent. Doose spent two days in the hospital for a nerve injury in the shoulder. His absence means a drastic change in the G. W. plan of battle.

Use Same Style.

George Washington and Kansas use the same style of attack, running from short kick formations, with single wing backs, plenty of spinners through the line and a sprinkling of forward passes. Kansas, however, employs a 6-2-2-1 defense, and the Colonials figure they can safely resort to passes against such a defensive line-up.

All week the team has been working on new pass plays and from all indications will go into the air in the earlier stages of the game. It may be a wise move, in view of Kansas' powerful line, which averages 193 pounds from tackle to tackle, and is reputedly one of the best in the Midwest.

Kansas' record for the season belies the power of the team. It got off to a flying start, winning two warm-up games and holding Notre Dame to a scoreless tie before adversity overtook it. Four defeats followed before the team regained its bearings and trounced Iowa State. It was impressive in soundly drubbing Missouri two days ago, and the train ride East is not expected to retract from its power.

The Sunflower aggregation has several outstanding men on its

In his 18-hole practice round for the $10,000 Biltmore open, Guldahl collected 6 birdies and a dozen pars. He lowered by 3 strokes the former course record of 68, held jointly by Walter Hagen, Harry Cooper, Gene Sarazen and Shute.

Guldahl played with Roland Mackenzie and Craig Wood, who got 72s, and Denny Shute, who took a 73.

Midwest Captures 4 Places, East 2, on 1933 All-American Team

Buckler Gets Half Back Position

Warburton, Lund, Sauer Complete Associated Press' Back Field.

Notre Dame First Time in Five Seasons Fails to Gain Place.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (AP).—In a terrific battle of ballots and ballyhoo, for the fifth successive year, the balance of All-American power in college football ranks has been captured by the Middle West.

Gridiron products of the great American midlands capture four of the eleven positions in the all-star lineup named by the Nation's experts in the ninth annual Associated Press consensus selections.

Three positions on the big team go to the Far West. The East and the South, although they produced the only major undefeated and untied teams of 1933, have to be satisfied with two places each.

The Mid-West can thank the remarkable all-around strength of the Big Ten and its neighboring conference, the Big Six, for the distinction of keeping the All-American argument under control in a season featured by the sharp and startling decline of Notre Dame. This year is the first in five successive campaigns that the Fighting Irish have not contributed one or more players to the all-star eleven. Their only consolation is the naming of Hugh Devore at end on the third team.

Little to Choose.

Taking the All-America squad as a whole, consisting of 33 players, the Far West enjoys a slight margin, with ten players named, as compared with nine for the Middle West, eight for the East and six for the South, but there was very little to choose in the voting for most of the positions. In fact the majority of contests for places were so close that on paper, at least, many might well figure that the second or third string line-up possesses enough ability and strength to wallop the All-America itself.

On their performances over the stretch of a sensational season, it might have been possible to name four different All-America backs every other week. However, the final weight of evidence turned the scales in favor of "Cotton" Warburton, of Southern California, at quarter back, "Pug" Lund, of Minnesota, and Jack Buckler, of Army, at half back positions, with Nebraska's mighty George Henry Sauer in the full back role.

Feathers Stands Out in Dixie.

Many Southern enthusiasts will fail to understand how so spectacular an all-around back as Beattie Feathers of Tennessee could be left off the first team by the Nation's critics. In the Big Ten, few will admit there is a superior to Duane Purvis of Purdue. The East has seen no better quarterback than Army's versatile Paul Johnson. Similarly, Pacific Northwest experts think no All-America team is entirely satisfactory without Mike Mukulak of Oregon or Norman (Red) Franklin of Orgeon State in the starting line-up.

On redirect examination, however, after all the rebuttals are in, it appears difficult to dislodge any of the first string quartet. Even in Southern California's one setback, Warburton was an outstanding star and the midget Trojan quarterback

Since 1873, the Tigers have been coming to New England and the Elis have been going down to New Jersey year after year with only one break during the World War, and their followers have come along with them. There have been good teams and bad, years where one team outclassed the other on paper, as the high-kiting sophomores of Princeton, unbeaten, scored upon only once, do this battered Yale eleven, walloped by Army and Harvard, beaten by Georgia.

But all this makes no difference, either to players of the other days, the graduates who make this their annual rendezvous, or the athletes who meet tomorrow where paper predictions don't count, and the intenseness of historic rivalry makes all things even.

Hotels were crowded, as usual, the lobbies filled with the howls of old friends meeting again. There were lights everywhere; excitement, but no wise Princeton man took the odds that made his team a 2½-to-1 favorite.

Winding up the 1933 season, sharing only with Army and Notre Dame in New York the major honors of the day, the game seemed certain to attract a crowd of almost 50,000 to the huge bowl, far less than capacity, but considered unusual under the circumstances. Perfect weather conditions are promised, clear and cold.

Coach Wallace Wade and a full squad of athletes arrived by train this morning, retired to a residential section hotel and later held a final drill this afternoon. Wade said his team was in good shape, with the exception of Laney, a back, who definitely is out with injuries.

First Duke Eleven.

Several times in past years Wade has brought a team with championship aspirations to face Georgia Tech, but this is the first time his eleven has fought here since he left Alabama for Duke.

Southeastern fans always liked the play of Wade's old power clubs at Alabama and many will flock to the park tomorrow to see his latest creation.

Quarter Back Roberts, Tackle Williams and Half Back Martin were numbered on Tech's hospital list, but it is probable that all will see action.

Several special trains will arrive tomorrow from Durham and other points in North Carolina with thousands of Blue Devil supporters.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (AP).—A capacity crowd of 78,000 is expected to jam the Yankee Stadium tomorrow to find out whether there is any real answer to the 1933 riddle—what's wrong with Notre Dame—or whether the fighting Irish will prove simply the final stepping stone to an unbeaten season for West Point's Cadets.

Because it is the last and biggest chance for Notre Dame to pull something out of the football wreckage, in addition to being the ideal spot for the underdog to come through, expert opinion tonight carefully weighed the prospect of an upset. Army, nevertheless, ruled a 9-to-5 favorite and, on the basis of comparative records, figured to win handily from a team that has been struggling all season to find the right combination.

Sell-Out Anticipated.

Army officials anticipated a sell-out, with less than 2,000 tickets left today and the demand for these increasing rapidly. They frustrated the activities of speculators by putting the remaining pasteboards on public sale. The scalpers were asking $10 to $15 for "choice" seats, but quickly trimmed the scale when Army set up headquarters in a Broadway hotel.

Cloudy but moderate weather is forecast for the game, scheduled to start at 1:30 p. m. The Cadet Corps will be on hand from West Point to cheer the Army's drive for an unbeaten record.

A notable assemblage of onlookers also will witness what promises to be a colorful and exciting climax to the Eastern gridiron campaign.

The possibility that Army, if victorious, may consider an invitation to represent the East in the annual Rose Bowl game on New Year's Day at Pasadena, Calif., adds unusual interest to the outcome. It is still questionable whether West Point policy will permit such a trip; even if the invitation is forthcoming, but the Cadets are no less anxious on that account to put a triumphant touch to one of the best seasons in Army history.

Army Regulars Ready.

Youthful Lieut. "Gar" Davidson, finishing his first year as head coach, has the Army regulars back in top shape and intact for the game, with several innovations planned in an attack featuring Paul Johnson, versatile quarter back, and Jack Buckler, the triple-threat all-American half back. No team this year has stopped these rover boys, who hope to combine a passing and running attack with convincing effect.

Except for the big full back star, Don Elser, whose knee injury is expected to keep him out of the game entirely, Notre Dame will have its full strength. The team arrived from South Bend this morning, remained in the suburbs and rehearsed the strategy of 1933.

Racing Commission Rules on Jockey Cases.

Baltimore, Dec. 1 (AP).—The license of Jockey Joseph McCleary was revoked by the Maryland Racing Commission today after he had appeared before the body to tell that he had given one of his mounts at Bowie an "easy ride" under instructions from an outsider.

McCleary did not name the "outsider," and Jervis Spencer, jr., chairman of the commission, said "we acted accordingly." The action affects McCleary's status at all major tracks.

The jockey was called before the commission for his ride of Don Pedro, which finished far back in a field of nine in the Bowie meet. Thursday, with Lee Humphries up. Don Pedro ran a winning race.

The commission decided to give Jockey Sammy Renick another chance, despite what Chairman Spencer called a "rotten record," and lifted the suspension on Renick which had been placed during the Bowie meet after his ride on Don Guzman.

GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY adds the final notation to its 1933 football record this afternoon at Griffith Stadium, where it encounters the powerful Jayhawks of Kansas U. in its second annual home-coming game. A crowd of 15,000 is expected to see the intersectional game, thereby setting a new yearly attendance record for District football.

Although crippled by injuries that may cause several changes in the starting line-up, the Colonials are confident of repelling the invaders to climax their season in a burst of glory. Kansas, however, is a 7-5 favorite.

George Washington will take the field with Ben Plotnicki at quarter back, Vonder Bruegge or Finis Parrish and "Tuffy" Leemans half backs, Bomba, full back; Benefield and Bill Parrish, ends; Deming and Clark, tackles; Morrison and Hickman, guards and Rathjen, center. A leg injury may keep Finis Parrish out of the starting line-up, but he is assured of playing at least part of the game.

Chris Doose tops a list of casualties that leave G. W. woefully weak in reserve talent. Doose spent two days in the hospital for a nerve injury in the shoulder. His absence means a drastic change in the G. W. plan of battle.

Use Same Style.

George Washington and Kansas use the same style of attack, running from short kick formations, with single wing backs, plenty of spinners through the line and a sprinkling of forward passes. Kansas, however, employs a 6-2-2-1 defense, and the Colonials figure they can safely resort to passes against such a defensive line-up.

All week the team has been working on new pass plays and from all indications will go into the air in the earlier stages of the game. It may be a wise move, in view of Kansas' powerful line, which averages 193 pounds from tackle to tackle, and is reputedly one of the best in the Midwest.

Kansas' record for the season belies the power of the team. It got off to a flying start, winning two warm-up games and holding Notre Dame to a scoreless tie before adversity overtook it. Four defeats followed before the team regained its bearings and trounced Iowa State. It was impressive in soundly drubbing Missouri two days ago, and the train ride East is not expected to detract from its power.

Guldahl Shoots a 65 For Biltmore Record

In his 18-hole practice round for the $10,000 Biltmore open, Guldahl collected 6 birdies and a dozen pars. He lowered by 3 strokes the former course record of 68, held jointly by Walter Hagen, Harry Cooper, Gene Sarazen and Shute.

Maryland U. Eleven Hopes to End Season With Triumph Over Florida Today

Byrd Sticks To Regular Line-Up

Both Teams Victors in Upsets in Games of Last Week.

TAMPA, Fla., Dec. 1 (Spl.). — Both barrels loaded and trigger cocked, Maryland and Florida tonight impatiently awaited the signal that will send them charging across the greensward of Plant Field tomorrow in their intersectional game. The 'Gators ruled a favorite over the invaders, though the odds were close and Maryland was not lacking for supporters.

A wide open battle is expected tomorrow. Both elevens are ringing down the curtain on a season that has been none too kind, and they hope to climax the arduous campaign with a victory. Maryland's stunning 33-13 triumph over Washington and Lee, and Florida's 13-7 upset of Auburn last week, led to much speculation concerning the outcome of the game.

Maryland Line-Up Same.

Coaches Curley Byrd and Jack Faber tonight announced that the same team which started against W. and L. would take the field tomorrow. It includes Ennis and B. Buscher, ends; Minion and Callahan, tackles; Simpson and Bradley, guards; Webb, center; A. Buscher, quarter back; Nelson and Benner, half backs, and Crecca, full back.

Coach "Dutch" Stanley made a few changes in the Florida lineup to give senior members of the squad a chance in the final game of their careers. The shifts give the 'Gators a decided advantage in weights, which may be the deciding factor in the fray.

Neale Is Seen New Coach At Virginia

CARL "GREASY" NEALE, head coach at West Virginia University and former mentor at the University of Virginia may return to the Charlottesville institution as head coach to succeed Fred Dawson, The Post learned from authortative sources last night.

A movement is afoot by alumni groups in Washington, New York and Richmond to prevail upon the Cavalier athletic authorities to sign up Neale, whose contract expired at West Virginia yesterday with the conclusion of the football schedule.

Choice Seen Popular.

The choice of Neale as coach of the Virginia team would strike a popular chord throughout the State as well as with Virginia alumni groups throughout the country. Neale coached the Cavalier eleven from 1923 to 1928. He asked to be relieved of his contract, which had another year to run, to assume duties as assistant manager and coach of the St. Louis Nationals baseball team. The athletic authorities readily complied with his request and signed Earl Abel, of Colgate, to coach the eleven.

In 1931 Neale succeeded Ira Rodgers as coach of the West Virginia team, with fair success, winning 6 of the 11 games scheduled. This year the Mountaineers won three games, tied three and lost five.

Best Record in 1925.

While at Virginia, Neale's best records were made in 1925, when his team lost one game, and in 1926, when it dropped two contests. His outstanding achievement was the Virginians' victory over the hitherto undefeated University of Georgia team in 1925.

Dawson gained national recognition as a coach while at the University of Nebraska, where his Cornhuskers regularly beat Notre Dame, to ruin the Irish's undefeated slates three years in a row in the early 1920s. Dawson left the Nebraska institution in 1925 because of ill health, but returned to college coaching in 1931 at Virginia, succeeding Abel. In 1932, the Cavalier coach's eleven won five of the nine games played, while this past campagin Virginia won two games, tied two and lost six.

Close Battles Mark First Monthly Swim

Close competition for top honors in the children's diving marked the first regular monthly swim meet held at the Y. W. C. A. last night under the supervision of Florence Skadding Morris. Nancy Rawls, with 28.1 points, barely nosed out her sister, Jean, 27.7, with Shirley Thompson garnering 26.8 points to run a close third in this event.

Summary of events:

Intermediate group, 6 to 8 years, 20-yard free style—Sarah Levenson, first; Henry Suydam, second; Virginia De Atley, third. Time, 25 seconds. 9 to 11 years, 20-yard free style—Martha Motherhead, first; Olive Cartell, second; Gloria Perkins, third. Time, 17 seconds. 12 to 14 years, 20-yard free style—Gertrude Theunissen, first; June Mann, second; Helen Snyder, third. Time, 13 seconds.

Advanced group, 9 to 11 years, 40-yard free style—Nancy Rawls, first; Betty Pollock, second; Shirley Thompson, third. Time, 28 3-5 seconds. 12 to 14 years, 40-yard free style—Betty Thompson, first; Jean Rawls, second; Marie Pollock, third. Time, 25 seconds.

Women's group, over 14, 40-yard free style—Phyllis Mitchell, first; Elizabeth Redmond, second; Thelma De Atley, third. Time, 27 seconds. 40-yard back stroke—Marie Pollock, first; Phyllis Mitchell, second; Ruth Gross, third. Time, 33 1-5 seconds.

The Unforgettable Figure

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (Spl.).—Of all the football games played, the Army-Notre Dame game is the one that misses Knute Rockne the most. This more than any other seemed to me to be a coach's game. It was Rockne against Biff Jones or McEwan, or whoever happened to be at the Point at the time, and when Rockne left the side lines it seemed to me that most of the color and drama of that game left the game with him. It was Rockne's pet game. He played in it in 1913 and then later as a coach helped to build it to the point where it rivaled the Harvard-Yale and the Army-Navy games as a spectacle and as a sell-out attraction.

Tomorrow's game here is sold out because the name of Notre Dame has not yet lost its luster as a football competitor. But the team is not the integral unit that it once was. It is not a happy team and above all it will not in its play and its behavior on the field be an expression of that whimsical and sometimes impish character known as Rockne.

There will be no squat, powerful figure in belted topcoat and slouch hat bent square-shaped to act as twelfth man on the team. No doubt Hunk Anderson wants to win, more than anything else, but he probably does so for other reasons than Rock's. Old Knute loved that Army crowd and that's why he liked to beat them.

Football, I think, is going to grow away from coaches and high pressure coaching, but those were the days when Notre Dame was about 30 per cent football team and 70 per cent Rockne. He was a master strategist, a great psychologist, an eloquent spellbinder and something of a magician. He had power over men. They believed in him more than they did in themselves and they therefore did the things he told them they could do. Particularly against the Army did this magic work. It was little use for West Point to scout the Rockne teams because they could never scout Rockne. An end and a tackle who might have looked like inviting avenues for plays to be run over them in other games never came up that way against the Army.

Rock used to bring his teams into New York two or three days before the game and take them up to the Westchester-Biltmore Club, at Rye, and there we would go to find Knute and his kids practicing out on one of the polo fields. At that time everything was informal and social because all the work of coaching had been done. The boys were merely on parade, running through signals and catching passes. Rock was busy ducking professional Notre Damers (who had never been near the university) who were trying to mooch tickets.

Usually Rock would steal away from practice early, retire to his room with the gentlemen of the press, crack a quart and begin to tell football stories. It mightn't have been what we were sent to get, but it was swell fun.

I never found out any way what there was to write about in a team's running signals and limbering up the day before a big game. Maybe our editors just wanted us to try to get close to some of Rock's magic to see if any of it would stick. Knute usually would come up with a story or two for us and usually about some of his kids and their bravery in playing with injuries, &c. Some of it obviously was meant for Army consumption.

Of course, after the game the real get-together football parties would commence, Rockne and the whole Army crowd, and a lot of old Notre Dame and Army football players, newspapermen, coaches—and a guy with a good pair of listeners could pile up enough copy to last him the rest of the winter just by keeping his mouth closed and his ears open. There all the old games were played over again, the afternoon's game rehashed and post-mortemed and friendly men met on friendly terms.

Well some 85,000 of us will be at the Yankee Stadium tomorrow, and the Cadets will march again, and the football players will come tumbling onto the field. Bands will be playing and crowds cheering, but for me the spark will be missing as it has been missing since Rockne left.

There will just be a lot of guys named Joe on the field doing the best they can and if it isn't good enough there will be no one around to hypnotize them into being better than they ever dreamed they could be.

Curious hunch: Notre Dame to beat Army tomorrow. Don't know why. Doesn't make sense. No rhyme or reason to it. Just a funny feeling that that mob of Notre Dame kids—all of them swell football players—may get a yen themselves to wind up the season with a win over Army. They might suddenly click. Army looked none too good against Navy last week. This has been a curiously scrambled football year. Everything favors Army too highly. You may mark me down as picking Notre Dame—not in any capacity as expert, but as one of the best blind guessers on Manhattan Island.

Nour a Rarity; Is Flyweight Who Hits

Foe of Landers on Tuesday Has Gained Draws With Stiff Punchers.

THE record of Frankie Nour, who battles Billy Landers in an eight-round co-feature at Portner's Tuesday, indicates that the Rumonian champion is that rarity of the squared circle—a flyweight who punches. That he also is a good boxer is attested by the fact that he has been able to draw with such stiff punches as Young Perez and Speedy Dado.

In his fight with Young Perez, he punched the conqueror of Frankie Genaro to the canvas several times. At the conclusion of the 12-round encounter, which took place just three months before Perez battered Genaro into a two-round knockout, Nour was given a draw, despite the opinion of the majority of spectators that he had won easily. Although not in the record, it is claimed that he dumped Midget Wolgast several times in holding the flyweight champ to a draw.

That Nour is at the apex of his fighting career is evidenced by the fact that three of his best fights, against Pancho Villa, Yo Tee Ken and Speedy Dado, were held on the West Coast within the past three months. He knocked out Villa in the third round, decisioned Yo Tee Ken and drew with Dado.

Gallaudet Reduces Cage Squad Today

A TWENTY-FIVE PER CENT "cut" that the NRA is powerless to prevent will be made in Gallaudet's basket ball squad following practice today. Approximately 25 players—half the number to report for initial practice—remain on the roster, but with the opening game scheduled next Friday night, Coach Wally Krug is anxious to reduce the squad to normalcy and get down to hard work.

A half dozen veterans apparently have the inside track on the regular positions, though several promising newcomers are making determined bids for berths. Capt. Heimo Antila, Stephen Koziar and Ken Burdette, guards; Jimmy Rayhill, George Brown and Red Crockett, forwards, are holdovers. Krug must unearth a capable center to round out the quintet.

The schedule:

Browning Pins E. Dusek With New Hold

Wins Bout in 50 Minutes; Rudy Dusek Victor Over Manich.

LIKE the undertaker, who is bound to get you sooner or later, Jim Browning, head of the Curley herd of rassling pachyderms, persisted in trying to get his famed leg scissors airplane on Ernie Dusek in last night's feature at the Auditorium and finally succeeded. Three times he nailed Rough Rudy's tough little brother early in the bout and failed to make the kill.

For the next three-quarters of an hour, Ernie prevented Browning from using his most effective weapon by crouching and closing up like a turtle, but he then became a little careless, Browning got his hold again and it took just four applications to spell curtains for Dusek. The elapsed time was 50 minutes.

Spectacular Hold.

This scissors airplane, it might be mentioned, is the most spectacular hold seen here this season. Browning is on top when he gets it, gives a quick flip while rolling on his back, twirls his foe overhead like the propeller of an airplane and then dumps him to the mat. He keeps his hold and gives encores until the referee calls him off and his opponent is dragged out, giving a perfect imitation of a corpse.

There seemed to be a strong suspicion in the minds of most of the 4,500 present that Browning, a giant, weighing 230, but fast as well as powerful, could have ended things sooner if he had had any other place to go. But, be that as it may, it was quite a bout, with enough rough stuff shown to keep the fans interested throughout.

Rudy Dusek Winner.

The prestige of the Dusek family was upheld in the semifinal when Rough Rudy Dusek downed George Manich in a bout that had the cash customers standing up and yelling much of the time. The end came after 22½ minutes of warfare. The boys indulged in a short imitation of a prize fight. Manich emerged with a badly cut eye and much weakened, and Rudy applied a chin lock, followed through with a drop and Manich eased out of the picture.

Tiny Roebuck registered the only triumph during the evening's festivities, gaining it in 8 minutes over Jim Henry, a 230-pound Oklahoman, whose face-making ability seemed to be his chief stock in trade. He even outgrimaced that old master, Frank Speers. They do not pay off on leering ability, however, so big Jim came out second best, being flattened flatter than a pancake with a crotch and body slam which ended with 275 pounds of Roebuck crashing on top of him.

Strack Has Tooth Hold.

Browning's leg scissors airplane was not the only new hold shown last night. Charley Strack had a footh hold which was most effective in a preliminary against Kurt Gabriel. It netted him a draw in an act which more resembled a tumbling exhibition than it did a rassle match.

The fans were humming "Hearts and Flowers" before the affair ended. Later, Promoter Turner hinted that he planned to have Strack fed just before his next showing here, so that he would not try to eat up any more foes.

Vic Christy and Stanley Pinto also battled to a draw. The latter was such a villain and baby-faced Vic had such a sweet disposition that his failure to retaliate actually peeved most of the cash customers. The lads put on quite a show, though.

High School Highlights.

SEVERAL items that were not contained in the account of the intersectional tilt between Central and White Plains in New York Thanksgiving Day, which Central won, 20-0:

Joe Melia, Central's star right tackle, was the outstanding lineman on the field despite his 145 pounds. His deadly tackles and all-around offensive play caught the fancy of the New York scribes who covered the game. Joe transferred here from a New York high school this fall and was ineligible to compete the first six weeks of the campaign according to the interhigh transfer code. Watch him next season.

Between the halves, the New York High School band of 65 pieces gave a stirring concert on the field, which really was "somethin'," according to the handful of Washington rooters who accompanied the team on the trip.

Morty Wilmer, former captain and quarter back on the 1925 championship Central eleven, who later played for the University of Pennsylvania, after which he enrolled in the Georgetown Law School, passed the bar exams last June and is now selling insurance out of a local office.

"Sis" Esenstadt, former basket ball star at Business, now Roosevelt, and Jerry O'Connor, former St. John's court flash, are members of the Catholic University varsity five. They are at forward and guard, respectively.

U. S. Women Booters End Year With Victory

Evanston, Ill., Dec. 1 (AP). — The United States touring eleven closed its schedule in the National Women's Field Hockey Tournament today with a 5-to-0 victory over the Midwest team. The All-Stars won three straight matches.

Young Billiard Champ To Show Here Monday

Robert Moore, national junior champion, will play Raymond Sisler in an exhibition at the Arcadia at 7:30 p. m. Monday. Sisler was the junior champion of Washington last year.

This match is the second of a series arranged by the National Billiards Association. Willie Hoppe will exhibit here two weeks from Monday and future matches will bring Layton, Rudolph, Caras and Ponzi. No admission will be charged.

Municipal Golf Association Planned

East Potomac Course, Rock Creek, Anacostia, Would Be in Group.

FORMATION of a District public links golf association that will include the East Potomac, Rock Creek and Anacostia golf courses is expected to be consummated this winter.

Winfree Johnson, athletic director of the Recreation and Welfare Association, and one of those instrumental in the organization of the Anacostia Golf Club, stated yesterday he planned to approach S. G. Loeffler, president of the Park Amusement Co., which operates East Potomac, Rock Creek and West Potomac, with respect to the formation of an association that would serve as the governing body of all tournaments, local and intercity team matches.

First to Organize.

Anacostia last month became the first of the municipal courses to organize a golf club. It now has 23 active and 9 associate members, and expects to have close to 100 members by next spring. Annual dues of $20 have been assessed each active member, which includes locker and privilege of playing golf without any additional charge.

Should the municipal association be formed, all tournaments staged at the three public links courses would be carried on under its jurisdiction.

LORRAINE GULLI, No. 1 ranking bowler of the United States, went to the front in the first block of the sixth annual bowling of the Meyer Davis women's sweepstakes, in her efforts to retain the championship for the event.

Starting with a 120 game, Miss Gulli was never headed and went out to annex the first block with a 345 set, to lead 14 other entries. Bess Hoffman, Columbia star of the District Ladies League, finished second, with 330; Billie Butler, Lucky Strike star, was third, with 329, and Doris Goodall, captain of the Arcadia team, came fourth, 20 pins behind the leader, with 325.

Bill Wood, manager of the Lucky Strike alleys, who is sponsoring the event, added $25 to the actual $45, making the prizes total $70—first prize, $28; second prize, $21; third prize, $14, and fourth prize, $7.

The only three matches scheduled in the National Capital League at the Lucky Strike Alleys concluded with a three-game sweep by the second-place Lucky Strike Barbers over the Star Auto Service, advancing them closer to the top while the leading Silver Spring Skating Rink team was idling; the Temple Hand Laundry's whitewash of the Lucky Strike crew and the lowly Life Insurance team's taking the odd game from Judd & Detweiler.

The Book of Washington and the leading Skaters postponed their matches due to the illness of "Whip" Litchfield and "Dutch" Newman.

Micro's 138 game and 354 set led the rolling of the leading D. C. Butcher team in the Building Contractors League at the Arcadia drives. Southern Asbestos carried away team honors with a 570 game and 1,652 set.

Reynolds and Bartel each took a 145 game to share individual game honors for the Traffic team of the Interstate Commerce Commission League at the Arcadia Alleys last night. Reynolds' 369 was the best individual set. Traffic's 557 game and 1,627 set were the best team effort.

Thirty dollars in cash prizes, at the rate of one silver dollar an hour, was the reward for the man and woman rolling the highest game each hour in the "turkey day" festivities at the Arcadia bowling alleys.

Arlingtons Want Game.

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

Saturday Morning Quarter Back.

ARMY-NOTRE DAME—When Irish eyes are smiling it won't be this evening. The Cadets pack too much power, too much punch for Notre Dame. Army might not have looked so hot against Navy, but Navy looked great and Army beat Navy, so there. Everything points to Army except that funny feeling that Notre Dame is due to do something to somebody before the season is over.

Princeton-Yale—This is one of the games that makes the Saturday morning quarter back's job a cinch. Yale has no right in the same arena with Princeton this season. The Bulldogs have neither bark nor bite this year. The Tigers are unbeaten, united and unafraid of Yale. Thus, one confirmed vote for Princeton.

George Washington-Kansas—Those two weeks rest are equal to a fifth down for the Colonials, especially with Kansas having played last Thursday and having spent yesterday on a train. All this sounds like a nice build-up for the selection of G. W. to beat Kansas. Well, that's the dope as this corner views it.

Southern California-Georgia—I seem to remember that 60-0 beating Georgia took from the Trojans two years ago. Georgia is a better team this season and Southern California has slipped. But I doubt if the Trojans have slipped to the extent that Georgia can take them. Coast teams are tough for the Easterners when they come East. But on their home lot—sorry, Georgia.

Maryland-Florida—O-o-o, Maryland, oh, My Maryland. That was a swell game the Old Liners won from Washington and Lee, but the Generals are not in the same class with Florida. But it's a nice trip for the Maryland boys, especially at this season of the year.

Duke-Georgia Tech—Wallace Wade's team is heading for that last hurdle and the invitation to the Rose Bowl. It will be nice to have a Southern team out there again, but Georgia Tech has notions. Flying into the very face of fate, the statistics and expert opinion, I am casting one very deliberte ballot on Duke—to lose to Tech.

Boston College-Holy Cross—Boston's Eagles, like the Blue Eagle, are having their troubles this season. Holy Cross figures to be among them. The Crusaders look too determined, too tough, this year.

Tulane-Louisana State—The last vestige of Louisiana's Southeastern Conference championship hopes hangs on this game. L. S. U. will have some kind of a co-claim with Alabama if it can beat Tulane. That, however, is something else again. With all due respect to Louisiana, I'm taking Tulane.

Auburn-South Carolina—The Gamecocks are good in their class, but they appear to be outclassed today. Auburn has been inconsistent all season, but South Carolina deosn't figure to extend the Plainsmen.

G. W. Confident For Kansas Fray

roster. Pete Mehringer, tackle; Fred Harris, quarter back; Ole Nesmith, half back, and Ray Dumm, half back, are rated without peers in the Big Six Conference. They have performed brilliantly for their alma mater this year. They'll bear watching this afternoon.

A distinguished audience will sit in on the proceedings, including Assistant Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring, former Governor of Kansas, and Senator George McGill, of the same State.

Paul Hudson, quarter back on the first University of Kansas football team, which was organized in 1890, also will be on hand.

West Virginia Welcomes Return of Legalized Racing at Charles Town Today

New Course Ready for Opening

Two-Year-Olds to Vie in the Inaugural, First-Day Feature.

Officials Named for 20-Day Meeting; Cassidy to Start Fields.

By Staff Correspondent.

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., Dec. 1. Legalized horse racing returns to West Virginia tomorrow over the Shenandoah Valley Jockey Club's new course, located on the outskirts of the city. At 1 p. m. a group of maiden 2-year-olds will parade to the post and Starter Marshall Cassidy will send them away from the starting gate a few minutes later. Needless to say, the mutuel betting machines will have clicked and the all-important payoff will begin after Judge Joseph McLennan signals that the result is official.

With more than 400 horses quartered here and at least 50 jockeys available, those in charge of the project believe that only an average break in the weather is needed to make the meeting a success. With the opening less than 16 hours away, a full moon is shining out of a clear sky and it appears that the new track will be christened under ideal weather conditions.

Work Has Been Speeded.

Work has had to be speeded to complete the course in time for the scheduled meeting. There have been rumors that racing would not start tomorrow. However, Joseph B. Boyle and Thomas K. Lynch, who have made the track possible, have insisted that the plant would be ready for business. As far as the comfort of the fans and the horsemen are concerned, the course is fit.

The grand stand, clubhouse and paddock need only polishing up here and there to make the Shenandoah layout a major track. The racing strip, which has been raised 10 feet above the level of the infield, is seven-eighths of a mile long. However, an extended chute will be used for races of 6 furlongs to 1 1-16 miles.

Today's feature race is The Inaugural, a 5-furlong test that has drawn a field of shifty 2-year-olds, the majority of which were winners during the Maryland season.

Timer—Richard Pending, of Baltimore.

Track Superintendent—Richard Pending.

Veterinarian—Dr. Henry J. McCarthy, of Baltimore.

One-Horse Harry

At Charles Town.

No Mistake—This fellow closed a world of ground behind Royal Dunbar and Guardian at Bowie this week. Also was close to Don Guzman earlier. Worth playing across the board. Probable odds, 20 to 1.

Since she was 7 years old Miss Lorraine Bowman, of Los Angeles, has been allowed to try her hand at the controls of her father's airplane, much like the usual child is allowed to help "drive" the family automobile. Miss Bowman, however, became proficient in the operation of the airplane, and not long ago, she made her first solo flight.

She has been flying with her parents since she was 3 years old. She came from a flying family; her father holds a transport license and is an aviation firm representative; her mother is a well-known racing pilot.

4 All-American Posts Given Midwest

Junior Halfback

Yet on the same day Army's Johnson was making himself very annoying to the Navy, Columbia's Cliff Montgomery was running wild against Syracuse, and Jack Beynon of Illinois was adding further proof to the fact he is the country's greatest passing quarterback.

Buckler and Lund lead the list of halfbacks for the good and sufficient reason that they were not stopped by any opponent all season. Buckler is the jack-rabbit type of ball-carrier while Lund packs tremendous power in his drives along with his shiftiness. Both are triple threats of the highest grade. The margin they enjoyed over other and capable rivals is all the more noteworthy because each has one more year of varsity competition. Lund outshone every other ball-carrier in what one Big Ten coach described as the "toughest league" in college football.

Sauer's Margin Decisive.

George Henry Sauer, of Nebraska, won the full back berth in another close contest, with "Iron Mike" Mikulak, of Oregon, and Ralph Kercheval, Kentucky's one-man team, as his main rivals. The Husker's margin was fairly decisive, due to his superior ability as a ball-carrier, besides the fact he can back up a line with almost as much effectiveness as Mikulak and come close to matching Kercheval's kicking ability. The crowning argument in Sauer's favor came from Pittsburgh, which handed Nebraska its only defeat of the season by a margin of a touchdown tallied in the last period. "Without Sauer," commented a Pitt coach, "we would probably have beaten Nebraska by two or three more touchdowns."

Taken as a whole, the South produced perhaps the biggest collection of star backfield men for 1933, but it was difficult to name the best from one Saturday to the next. Feathers, after a slow start, finished with an outburst that had many of the experts indulging in superlatives and so seasoned an observer as Dan McGugin, of Vanderbilt, comparing the part-Italian youth with the immortal Willie Heston, of Michigan. Similarly, "Preacher" Roberts, of Tulane, captured the fancy of observers who had previously argued that "Cy" Grant, of Georgia, was the standout ball carrier of Dixie. Willard Howell, of Alabama, was another who came strong in the closing games of the campaign.

Early Favorites Fade.

In the Big Ten, the early season ballyhoo was strong for Crayne, of Iowa, and Everhardus, of Michigan, high scorer of the conference, but Lund and Purvis, the Purdue ace, finished with the best performance. Ohio State's backs, with the exception of Kabealo, a remarkable kicker, were disappointments. So were the Notre Dame ball-carriers, who could do about everything but cross the opposing goal line.

The Far West finished up by singing the praises of Warburton after first touting Stanford's stars, including Bobby Grayson, and then debating the relative merits of Red Franklin, of Oregon State, Mike Mikulak, of Oregon, and "Icehouse" Wilson, of St. Mary's.

The most popular choices along the 200-pound forward line of all-America defense proved to be Fred Crawford, Duke's great tackle; Bill Corbus, Stanford guard, and Chuck Bernard, another in the long list of fine Michigan centers. All three of these stars exhibited the ability to rise to emergencies, plus the resources of well-coached linemen and the physical qualities to overcome any let-down.

Crawford, drilled by Wallace Wade and Fred Sington, the latter an all-America tackle at Alabama in 1930, proved the South's outstanding lineman by a wide and convincing margin. Possessing a tremendous charge, Crawford rose to rare heights on the day Duke ended Tennessee's winning streak. To his leadership was attributed much of the success of Duke's first unbeaten team.

Wrecked Fordham Line.

Finding his running mate proved a problem which Oregon State solved by producing Adolphe John Schwammell, a 214-pounder who just about wrecked one of the East's strongest lines, Fordham's, and was no less valuable because of his kicking ability. He was the Coast's greatest tackle.

Ceppi, of Princeton, a key man in a remarkable Tiger line; "Cash" Gentry, sensational Oklahoma sophomore; "Chuck" Harvey, a one-man wrecking crew for Holy Cross; Art Buss, big Michigan State lineman; "Whitey" Wistert, of Michigan, and "Dutch" Fehring, of Purdue, were other standout tackles. Gentry comes heralded as the best in the "Big Six" since the days of Nebraska's Ed Weir.

Corbus, student leader and an inspiring type of player, helped achieve his all-American honors by outplaying one of his foremost rivals, Aaron Rosenberg, of California, in the game that marked the end of the long Trojan winning streak. Like Schwammel, Corbus possesses unusual kicking ability.

The other all-American guard, Francis (Zud) Schammel, of Iowa's rejuvenated team, is not to be confused with the Oregon State tackle. Schammel, regarded by Big Ten coaches as one of the finest offensive linemen developed in the Midwest in years, was a big factor in the Hawkeye battle against Michigan and upset victory over Purdue. He used his 215 pounds to advantage, not only in opening holes for runners like Joe Laws and Dick Crayne, but in consistently piling up opposing power plays. Schammel's grittiness carried him to a great season despite the handicap of leg poisoning.

When Michigan fails to produce a first-rate center it is big news. Bernard is described by one professional football coach as the best college player in the country. He is big, rangy and possesses a sixth sense for anticipating what opponents will do. In his roving position behind the line Bernard called Michigan's defensive signals. Without him the Wolverine hardly could have stayed on top of the "toughest league" in the country.

The ballots indicate Bernard had no real rival for the pivot post, although Coats of U. C. L. A., Siemering of San Francisco, Del Isola of Fordham, Moore of Iowa and Oen of Minnesota caught the fancy of many observers. The Big Ten clearly produced the year's best centers.

Stocks Climb Two-Tenths in Quiet Trading

Foreign Exchange Holds Interest; Sales Total 814,507 Shares.

The decline in British pounds after an early upturn of several cents following a fresh advance in the Treasury's gold price was accompanied by further rumors of an imminent "stabilization understanding" between Washington and London.

It was also reported that some foreign funds had been put into our markets, which would account partly for a demand for dollars; presumably, too, speculators were again buyers for covering purposes. At any rate, the sag of foreign currencies, in view of the 8-cent rise in Washington's bold bid to $34.01, was an interesting development of the day.

Moderate Stock Rally.

Stocks had a moderate rally during the morning, when gains of 1 to 3 points developed in a miscellany of shares, chiefly alcohols, metals and a few specialties. However, this improvement largely disappeared and the closing average of 90 issues was up but a small fraction from Wednesday. Gains by Federal bonds were of nominal size. Wheat finished heavily and cotton was little changed. The turnover in equities was only 814,507 shares.

Utilities resisted the early upward trend, softness being especially noted in American Telephone, which yielded around a point after Gen. Johnson's code statement had circulated on financial news tickers. Light and power stocks were mostly a bit lower on the day.

The alcohols apparently derived their stimulus from imminence of repeal. Motors were well supported and steels looked firm, U. S. Steel improving a major fraction. Allied Chemical duplicated its 1933 high. Du Pont, Standard Oil of New Jersey, U. S. Smelting, Socony-Vacuum, American Can and U. S. Smelting were more or less active at higher prices. Rails averaged a shade higher.

News on Business.

News bearing on other than monetary subjects included the car loadings figures for last week, which showed a relatively moderate decline from the previous week and the expected jump over 1932, the latter being due to inclusion of Thanksgiving Day in the comparable period a year ago. Dun & Bradstreet said the general trade tempo was slower this week, attributable to an element of caution which, it was explained, appears to be tempering commercial and industrial operations.

The agency said it had received its best reports from the farm belt and industrial districts where first pay checks of the Civil Works Administration had been received.

Foreign exchange rates hardened somewhat after the close of markets here and sterling, which had slightly more than lost an extreme rise of 8 cents, finished at $5.19¾, up 2¾ cents. French francs, at 6.14¾ cents, were up ¾ point net.

Wool Markets.

Boston, Dec. 1 (A.P.) (U. S. Department of Agriculture).—Prices of domestic wools are very firm, although trading is rather slow. Manufacturers continue to make inquiries and occasionally buy moderate quantities. Most of the sales are in 56s and finer grades of fleece and Territory wools. French combing 64s and finer Ohio fleeces have been sold at 29@30 in the grease while strictly combing staple or delaine wools out of similar lines are firmly held at 35@36.

The Meaning of "Stabilization"

Term Now Being Used to Mean Three Quite Different Things

By Ralph West Robey.

Before the current monetary controversy gets far it will be necessary, it seems to me, to clarify the meaning of the term "stabilization." Otherwise there is a likelihood that before long we shall be in the anomalous position of having one group demanding "stabilization" while another group insists that we already have "stabilization." We already, in fact, are suffering from comparable confusion on the terms "sound money" and "inflation." The Administration supporters say that they are the real "sound money" group and several of the outstanding spokesmen for the present financial policy of the Government, and even some of those that support printing-press money, insist that they are not inflationists. If there is added to this the further confusion of what constitutes stabilization it is difficult to see how the public possibly can formulate its opinions as to the relative merits of the two sides of the argument.

Actually, of course, there is little or no justification for any of these terms—sound money, inflation, stabilization—being misunderstood. Each of them has a quite definite meaning in financial terminology and within narrow limits always are so understood by students in the field. The trouble now is that the terms are being bandied around by those who have never learned the jargon of scientific monetary discussion, with the result that they feel free to make the words have any meaning which appeals to them at the moment. The public, too, knowing the terms only in a vague sort of way, accepts this wrong usage without question.

Term Is Used to Indicate Three Distinct Situations

In the case of the term "stabilization" the confusion arises apparently from the use of the word to indicate three separate conditions. One group is employ-in it to mean merely a cessation of positive action to depreciate the dollar. To these individuals we should have stabilization if the Government would abandon its gold-buying policy and let the dollar "seek its own level." Evidence of this point of view is amply provided by the outburst of stories to the effect that we now are getting a swing to stabilization every time the R. F. C. fails to advance the price for gold. Before the adoption of the gold-buying program this group found its stabilization in an absence of all positive moves toward inflation.

A second group considers that we would have stabilization if the currency were held at a more or less fixed point in relation to foreign currencies. The particular foreign currency usually thought of in this connection is sterling, but basically such stabilization means limited fluctuations between all major currencies. A good example of this point of view was presented in the World Economic Conference when there was talk of England, France and the United States joining together with a view to holding the exchange rates of their currencies steady in terms of each other. A current example is the story of the last few days that the Administration is considering working out a stabilization agreement with England whereby pounds will be held at around $5.25. This school of thought, thus, thinks of stabilization as something which is fixed arbitrarily and held through Government manipulation of exchange rates by means of a special fund, such as the British equalization fund.

Historical Use Refers to Maintenance of Gold Standard.

The third condition designated by the term "stabilization" is the establishment of a rate of exchange which rests upon the relative gold content of currencies and then the maintenance of this rate through following financial policies that will not disrupt this relationship. This means that there is convertibility of currency and bank credit into gold and complete freedom as to the movement of gold in any part of the country. More briefly it means the gold standard.

In the final analysis, I suppose, it makes comparatively little difference which of these three conditions is meant by "stabilization." It is important to know which is meant, however, if we are to have a sensible and intelligent argument on the subject. It would be well, therefore, for those using the term at least to state what they have in mind when they use the term.

Historically, stabilization means the gold standard. Because of this there is much to say for continuing to use the term in this way. The condition pictured by the second group mentioned above—holding a rate steady by artificial means—in the past customarily has been referred to as the "pegging of exchange rates." It was widely practiced during the war. The first condition—simply having the Government stop driving the currency to a lower point—does not fit into the term at all. It is purely a negative action and has a relation to stabilization only in so far as it may be followed by action leading to a return to the gold standard.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Trading on the stock exchange was quiet today. Industrials, especially aviation shares, were cheerful, while gilt-edged securities were maintained. Transatlantic issues hardened on favorable Wall street reports and Argentine rails weakened owing to the sterling exchange position. The market closed dull.

Paris—Awaiting indications from Wall street and the presentation of the Chautemps financial program, business on the bourse was inactive. Small losses were registered and the closing was indecisive.

Berlin—A cheerful opening was registered on the bourse owing to some buying. Quieting down later, the market closed with a few declines, especially dye shares.

Bond Market Is Unchanged; At 71.8 Level

Buyers and Sellers Deal With Caution; Trading, $8,867,000.

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—Aside from a late rally in United States Government securities, the bond market presented few features today and price changes generally were quite narrrow.

With both buyers and sellers exhibiting considerable caution, the trading volume was comparatively small, sales totaling only $8,867,0000, par value. The overage for 60 domestic corporate issues was unchanged at 71.8.

The Federal list was rather heavy in the morning, when the dollar sagged in foreign exchange dealings following another lift in the domestic gold rate of 1 cent an ounce, to $34.01.

Dollar Regains Declines.

The dollar later regained most of its earlier declines, however, and the Government division also came back substantially from its lows. Net gains ranged from one-thirty-second to eight-thirty-seconds of a point. The only loser was the called Liberty fourth 4¼s, which eased two-thirty-seconds of a point.

The rails followed a somewhat ragged routine. Some liens of Baltimore & Ohio, Burlington, Louisville & Nashville, Missouri Pacific, Nickel Plate, New York Central, New Haven, Pennsylvania, St. Louis Southwestern, Southern Pacific, Southern, Union Pacific and Western Pacific improved.

Gains and Losses.

Unimportant gains and losses ruled among the utilities and industrials. Advances of fractions to around a point were held by issues of American I. G. Chemical, Armour & Co., Duquesne Light, International Telephone, Laclede Gas, Remington Rand, Republic Iron & Steel, Western Union and Youngstown Sheet & Tube. Lehigh Valley Coal 5s got up 3½ points.

Declines of around a point were recorded by some issues of American Rolling Mill, Consolidated Gas, Hudson Coal, Pan-American Petroleum and Keith Corporation.

The foreign section was spotty. Berlin bonds were up as much as 5⅞ point, but German government 5½s dropped a point. Loans of Argentine, Bulgaria, Colombia, Dutch East Indies and Poland were up 1 to 2. French 7½s sagged 3¾ and 7s were off 2 points, weakness of these issues being attributed to the Treasury's continued loss of gold and growing budgetary uncertainties.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Hides—Raw stocks in all hands computed at the end of October by the Commodity Exchange, Inc., amounted to 4,328,000 pieces, an increase of 5 per cent as compared with the previous month. "In-process" stocks totaled 4,667,000, a slight increase over the in-process stocks at the end of September. Finished stocks in all hands as of October 31 were 6,130,000 pieces against 6,702,000 at the end of October last year.

Fuel oil—Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey has raised the price of grade C bunker fuel oil along the Atlantic seaboard and at Gulf Coast, Panama and West Indies ports 10 cents a barrel.

Copper—Some custom smelters are reported to have lowered their offering price to 8 cents a pound from the official level of 8¼ cents, but it is not believed in the trade that any considerable tonnage has been sold at the lower figure. Most of the sellers are holding to the 8¼-cent price.

San Francisco has called for bids Monday on $20,480,000 in improvement bonds, while Pennsylvania will consider tenders Tuesday for $25,000,000 in bonds at not more than 4½ per cent interest. Both prospective offerings were authorized at the November election.

New York, Dec. 1—Continued weakness in the price of foodstuffs at wholesale is reflected in the Dun and Bradstreet food index which fell from $1.96 last week to $1.93 for the week ended November 28. The latest level is 11.6 per cent above a year ago.

The industrial production index of Standard Statistics Co., is estimated at 66.3 per cent for November, against 73.3 for October and 62.5 for November, 1932. All figures are corrected for seasonal variation.

Curb's Prices Mount Under Alcohol Lead

Utilities Barely Steady; Sales Advance to 166,000 Shares.

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—With an eye to December 5, the prohibition repeal date, curb traders turned in today and lifted the alcohol shares with some spirited bidding. This gave a fillip to an otherwise quiet market. Utilities were barely steady, metals firm, and oils spotty.

Hiram Walker got up to 44, but tapered off at the close to 42¾, up 3¼. Distillers Corporation-Seagrams gained 2, while Canadian Industrial Alcohol A finished a point higher.

American Gas & Electric eased a minor fraction, but Electric Bond & Share was abount unchanged. Shares ending sizeable fractions to a point or more higher included Commonwealth Edison, General Tire & Rubber, Humble Oil, Newmont, Lake Shore Mines, Aluminum Co. of America, Standard Oil of Ohio, and Sherwin Williams.

Gulf Oil and Pan American Airways reacted. Transfers approximated 166,000, compared with 152,000 for Wednesday.

Russia Paying Interest on Gold Bonds

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—The initial annual interest disbursement on the first Soviet gold bond issue to be offered in the United States was being paid today, it was announced through the Chase National Bank as paying agent.

The announcement was of interest to bond circles in view of the recent American recognition of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Interest coupons on the 10 per cent issue, dated December 1, 1932, are being paid in American dollars based on the value of the gold rouble at today's rate of exchange. The par value of the gold rouble is about 51½ cents. Because of the depreciated dollar, the rate of payment will be approximately $3.07 per 100-rouble bond. Inasmuch as interest payments are computed on a gold basis, coupons presented after today will be redeemed at the exchange rate prevailing on the day of presentation.

The original purchase price of the issue was $51.45 per 100 rouble bond. Recipients of the first interest disbursement, therefore, will receive a return of 15.6 per cent, in view of the dollar's lowered value, since the securities were marketed. The bonds mature December 1, 1942. The State Bank of the U. S. S. R. agreed to repurchase bonds at par (100 gold roubles) and accrued interest any time after one year from the date of purchase. It was not known how many of these bonds has been presented for repurchase.

What the Stock Market Did.

	Fri.	Wed.
Advances	276	338
Declines	178	141
Unchanged	128	129
Total issues	582	608

Stocks—Trading was quiet as the market watched the fortunes of foreign exchange. A mild rally enabled the list to close two-tenths of a point higher. Sales volume declined to 814,507 shares.

Bonds—Late rallies failed to advance the bond market and prices closed unchanged from the 71.8 level. Buyers and sellers dealt with caution. Sales volume declined to $8,867,000.

Curb—Alcohols shares mounted under spirited bidding and enabled the curb to close higher. Utilities were barely steady. Sales increased to 166,000 shares.

Wheat—Values slumped and wheat closed almost at the bottom. Rains in the grain belt were blamed. A break at Liverpool, due to cheap offerings from Argentina, was a factor. December wheat sold at 82⅞; May, at 86.

Cotton—Prices again moved narrowly with the market closing slightly higher. March sold at 10.10. The general market advanced 3 to 9 points. December closed at 9.91; January at 9.97.

Rubber—Crude rubber futures closed steady, 20 to 30 points higher. December sold at 9.18; January at 9.33.

Sugar—Raw sugar was still the same at 3.15; refined was unchanged at 4.50.

Coffee—Spot coffee demand was dull. Santos No. 4 sold at 9 to 9¼; Rio No. 7 sold at 7⅝.

Gold—Bar gold sold in the United States at $34.01 per ounce, an increase of 8 cents. It stood in London at 125 shillings and 2 pence.

Dollar—The United States dollar sank again on foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $5.19¾ to the English pound; 6.14¾ cents to the French franc, and 37.50 cents to the German mark.

Cotton Rises Slightly Under Trade Buying

January Closes at 9.97 as General Market Advances 3 to 9 Points.

March contracts after selling up to 10.17 on the early demand, declined to 10.08 and closed at 10.10, with the general market ending steady at net advances of 3 to 9 points.

The opening was steady at 8 to 1 points higher on a fairly good trade and commission house demand which was encouraged by the further advance in the domestic gold price and the early action of the dollar in foreign exchanges.

The advance extended to 9.97 for December and 10.30 for May before the end of the morning or about 11 to 15 points net higher. The demand tapered off on this upturn and while offerings remained comparatively light, prices sagged during the balance of the day under Southern selling combined with scattered realizing or liquidation. December sold off to 9.88 and May to 10.19 in the late trading. Closing quotations were 2 or 3 points up from the lowest.

Reports from Washington giving additional details of the acreage-control program for next year were read with interest in the trade, although the main features of the program appeared to be about in line with expectations.

Reports from Texas said the basis was firm with offerings small and that more farmers in the northwestern part of the State were taking the Government 10 per cent loan offer.

Exports today, 13,316, making 3,372,780 so far this season. Port receipts, 39,791. U. S. port stocks, 4,140,949.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil closed 2 points lower to 4 net higher, today. The market was firm on scattered covering promoted by the steadiness of cotton, which offset the easiness of lard. Sales were 34 contracts, mostly in the way of switches. Bleachable spot nominal. December closed 4.26, January 4.36, March 4.64, May 4.84, July 4.99.

Hog Market Drops Sharply In Small Sale

Chicago, Dec. 1 (AP).—The hog market was sharply lower today in a thin market. A few sales were reported at fully 25 cents below Wednesday's prices with most bids even lower. Receipts were excessive, overshooting advance estimates by 10,000 head.

Producers and traders were both filled with misgivings before trade started. The Government processing tax was increased from 50 cents to $1 a hundredweight, effective today, to give the market a bearish outlook. The trade was gloomy because of the weak showing in November, when two strikes, one by sellers and the other by yard workers, had the market tied up for almost half the month. November receipts of 622,500 were 90,000 greater than in the same month of 1932.

Packers had 15,000 hogs direct and took no part in the open market. Eastern demand was narrow and the small butchers were inclined to hold off.

Receipts at the principal markets were much heavier than last week, but a little lighter than a year ago. Most sales at the outside centers were steady to 10 lower, with trade slow all along the line.

Cattle marketings were more than the trade could absorb, and a weak undertone pervaded the alleys. Although action was fairly brisk, much of the steer run was live-stock show entries with a good part of it destined for the open market eventually. Best long yearlings made $6.25 with light heifers only up to $6.

Sheep receipts were excessive at 23,000, almost twice the number expected, and prices ruled lower in slow dealings. Pressure was heaviest on heavy grades of fat lambs. Both natives and fed Westerns of top grades were held above $7.25, but only a few sales were reported.

Railroad Credit Loans Cut to $69,065,475

Loans from the emergency revenues, pooled by the railroads in their self-help program, have been reduced to $69,065,475, according to the financial statement of the Railroad Credit Corporation as of November 30, 1933, which was filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission today.

The Railroad Credit Corporation began liquidating June 1, 1933, and E. G. Buckland, president of the corporation, in a letter accompanying the report, calls attention to the fact that the cash and special deposit accounts aggregate $1,275,700, of which $397,359 is available for general liquidating purposes.

Wheat Contracts Approved.

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 1 (Spl.).—Wheat allotment contracts from Washington county farmers have been approved in Washington, according to word received by County Agent Milton D. Moore. Washington county is the 247th county in the country where the contracts have been approved.

Freight Loads Decreased to 581,347 Cars

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended November 25 totaled 581,347 cars, the Car Service Division of the American Railway Association announced today.

This was a reduction of 17,942 cars below the preceding week this year due to the usual seasonal decline in traffic. It was, however, an increase of 88,029 cars above the corresponding week in 1932 and an increase of 22,549 cars above the corresponding week in 1931, due to the fact that the corresponding weeks in the two preceding years contained Thanksgiving holiday, while the week this year did not.

Miscellaneous freight loading for the week of November 25 totaled 205,794 cars, a decrease of 1,693 cars below the preceding week, but 39,468 cars above the corresponding week in 1932 and 10,401 cars above the corresponding week in 1931.

Merchandise Declines.

Loading of merchandise less than carload lot freight totaled 164,649 cars, a decrease of 525 cars below the preceding week, but 17,898 cars above the corresponding week last year. It was, however, a decrease of 12,384 cars below the same week two years ago.

Grain and grain products loading for the week totaled 31,998 cars, a decrease of 454 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 5,335 cars above the corresponding week last year, and 2,406 cars above the same week in 1931. In the Western district alone, grain and grain products loading for the week ended November 25 totaled 21,373 cars, an increase of 4,012 cars above the same week last year.

Forest products loading totaled 22,855 cars, a decrease of 1,152 cars below the preceding week but 8,098 cars above the same week in 1932, and 3,020 cars above the same week in 1931.

Ore Loads Drop.

Coal loading amounted to 127,426 cars, a decrease of 8,377 cars below the preceding week, but 12,379 cars above the corresponding week in 1932, and 22,975 cars above the same week in 1931.

Coke loading amounted to 6,536 cars, a decrease of 836 cars below the preceding week, but 1,591 cars above the same week last year, and 1,795 cars above the same week two years ago.

Stocks Loadings Decrease.

Live stock loading amounted to 17,584 cars, a decrease of 4,799 cars below the preceding week, but 482 cars above the same week last year. It was, however, a decrease of 5,979 cars below the same week two years ago. In the Western Districts alone, loading of live stock for the week ended November 25 totaled 13,727 cars, an increase of 263 cars compared with the same week last year.

All districts showed increases compared with 1932. All reported increases, compared with the corresponding week in 1931, except the Southern, which showed a small reduction.

Czechs' Shoe Exports Drop Since 1928

The establishment during recent years of branch factories in foreign countries by the Bata firm has resulted in a notable decline of shoe exports from Czechoslovakia, according to a report from the American consulate, Prague, made public by the Commerce Department.

In 1928, Czechoslovakia shipped to foreign countries shoes having a value of more than 900 million crowns. From that period on shipments declined steadily, amounting to 344 million crowns in 1932 and to only 100 million crowns in the first eight months of the current year.

High import duties on shoes imposed by countries formerly large importers of shoes from Czechoslovakia caused the Bata company to establish branch manufacturing plants in Germany, England, Poland and Switzerland.

That Czechoslovakia has been successful in restricting its imports of shoes is revealed in import statistics since 1928. In that year receipts of foreign shoes had a value of more than 10 million crowns; in 1932 the total had fallen to less than two million, while imports in the first eight months of the current year amounted to only 680,000 crowns.

(Czechoslovak crown equals 4.84 cents U. S. currency, at current exchange rate.)

Tastyeast Forms Unit For Manufacturing Gin

New York, Dec. 1.—Samuel Green, president of Tastyeast, Inc., Trenton, N. J., today announces the formation of the Mount Rose Distilling Co., a wholly owned subsidiary, to manufacture gin immediately after the repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

Officers of the new company will be the same as those of Tastyeast, Inc. The plant, which will be in operation in about two weeks, will have a daily capacity of 800 cases, which can be increased as the demand warrants it.

Glory of Ephesus Recalled

Diana, One of "Seven Wonders of the World," Vanished After Arrival of Paul, Who Fought Heathendom at Its Citadel and Eluded Mob.

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS

One of the stock questions frequently sent in to editors of newspaper correspondence columns is "What Were the Seven Wonders of the World?"

The subject is of interest to every new generation. Seldom, though, is it realized that one of these "Seven Wonders of the World," and perhaps the most famous of all, figures in the New Testament story. Yet Diana of the Ephesians, the huge and precious statue of Artemis, the Mother Goddess, which the ancients believed came down from heaven, plays a large role in the missionary labors of the Apostle Paul. And by his Gospel she was overthrown.

To get the background of this exciting story we must recall that Ephesus was "The Eye of Asia," a city of culture, prosperity, luxury, and world-wide trade and pilgrimage. From Spain on the West and India on the East, and from all the wide region in between, pilgrims and traders thronged to Ephesus, which represented the apex of Graeco-Roman culture.

Only Memories Dwell There.

None of the ruined cities of the ancient world has attracted me so much or drawn me so often as Ephesus—except Jerusalem. The excavated ruins are far more interesting than those of Babylon. Sculptures, marble pavements, baths, theater, library, and houses all may be seen today by the leisurely tourist. This well-preserved theater, a huge and sumptuous structure, once echoed to the cries of the mob bent on lynching Paul. These streets are the very stones pressed by the feet of Paul and Apollos and Luke and John, and Mary, the Mother of Jesus, for whom John cared to the end. The stately harbor is now silted up, and resembles a huge green frying pan.

For Ephesus today is dead and uninhabited. Only memories dwell there—memories of the glory of an older civilization at its ripest and rottenest; memories of the labors of Missionary Paul and his fellow-saints, in doughty combat with paganism; memories of the great Diana and her cult; memories of the Ecumenical Councils of the early church, which determined the doctrines of Christendom; memories of the desolation that wiped out this once-glorious city and covered it with the slow debris of the centuries, so that the archaeologist's spade has been needed to recover it.

Diana Is Dead; Paul Lives On.

Not one out of a hundred of the relatively few tourists who visit Ephesus ever learns even the site of the once gorgeous and famous Temple of Diana of the Ephesians. I know the spot, as revealed by archaeologists, but it is marked by only a few jutting columns, and is practically nothing but a depression in the ground, near a Moslem mosque, overlooking the city from the heights to the East.

What a dramatic defeat! Gone is Diana, whom the Ephesians boasted that the whole world worshiped. Gone is every vestige of her cult. On all the earth there is not a living creature to do her honor. Even the place that was the center of world pilgrimage, in the days when Paul confronted her power, was lost to memory, until Christian archaeologists found it. Diana is dead, but Paul and his gospel live in ever-widening conquests. It needed a deal of faith on the part of the little group of missionaries to envisage this victory, which they did not live to see. "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."

A Man's Love for a City.

Recently, at a testimonial dinner, I heard eminent Philadelphians exult in their love for their city. With this lesson in mind, I thought of other civic loyalties, including Paul's devotion to Ephesus and the Christians there. He labored longer in Diana's city than in any other place—about three years. As a thoroughbred warrior he rejoiced in coming to grips with heathendom at its very citadel. What an inspiration is he to every city pastor who feels helpless and well nigh hopeless in the midst of a great city's sin. Ephesus is evidence that there are no odds too great for the gospel to meet.

At first, Paul went, as usual, to the synagogues with his Message. But son the Jews would have none of that, so he moved his meetings into the hall of Tyrannus. Nor was his work confined to meetings. Day and night, the missionary and his friends bore their witness in every quarter of the great city. So permeated was Ephesus with their influence that the vested interests associated with the worship of Diana became alarmed, and staged a riot in protest.

Demetrius and his fellow-silversmiths stand for the perpetual phenomenon of established business in opposition to progress and human welfare. They are the lineal progenitors of the captains of industry who are today seeking to sabotage the NRA in the United States. All they cared about was their own profits. Little mattered to them the new Life that was entering into the people. Nowadays it seems as if the Pauline principle is coming to its greatest vindication in the triumph of popular rights over vested interests.

Perils of Popularity.

Out of this great drama of Ephesus, the scene that has been chosen by the International Lesson Committee for special study is the incident of the unscrupulous seven sons of Sceva, who sought to profit by Paul's popularity. They had witnessed his wonders of power and of healing and of changed lives; so they undertook to exorcise evil spirits by speaking the name of Jesus, whom Paul preached. They were professional magicians and were willing to adopt any method that would bring them money—early instances of the men who join the church because it is good for their business.

But the evil spirit knew the difference bewteen the genuine and the imitation. So the demoniac leaped upon them and gave them a terrible beating. Thus early did Christianity face the perils of popularity, the drawing into its following of insincere persons who had no vital religious experience. To this day the greatest weakness of the Church is its respectability. If it cost more to be a Christian it would be better for everybody. A measure of purifying persecution would be good for the Church. The real Christians left in Russia today are few, but mighty and sure to prevail.

Old-Time Book-Burning.

Hitler followed an ancient fashion when he recently ordered the burning of proscribed books in Germany. That sort of thing is one of the futilities practiced by the centuries.

In Ephesus, however, there was a book-burning of another sort. The city was famous for its magicians and soothsayers and their amulets. Many of these were converted to the Gospel, the fate of the sons of Sceva being an arresting factor in their change. Of their own accord, and to show how completely they broke with their evil past, these men publicly consigned their books of magic, and other instruments, to the flames, burning up a fortune. Thus they gave proof of their penitence.

In a succinct sentence, Luke gives a summary of the progress of the Gospel in Ephesus—a movement that spelled the doom of Diana—"So mightily grew the word of the Lord and prevailed."

Baby Mine — By Ham Fisher

Walt Mason, Himself

Wolf at the Door.

The wolf was at my door, I heard him howl and roar; the symbol gaunt of woe and want, he made me sad and sore. For once my door was free from varmints such as he, and I could sit and dream and knit beneath my banyan tree. But now the wolf was there, his yowlings filled the air; there were no pies to greet my eyes, my cupboard shelves were bare. I tried from day to day to shoo the wolf away, but he'd come back upon his track and fill me with dismay. All kindly methods failed, my pleas with rage were hailed; the wolf stayed there, to my despair, and misery prevailed. I thought the matter o'er, and studied wolfish lore; and in my dreams I framed up schemes to drive him from my door. And then I said, one day, "Why drive the wolf away? He ought to feed a man in need, so I'll proceed to slay." I opened wide the oak, and to the wolf I spoke: "It's doubtless true you'd make a stew to nourish hungry folk." I look for wolves today, and hope they'll come my way; when they are boiled or fried or broiled they have a rare bouquet. When you are feeling blue, old friend, it's up to you, to use your woes and things like those your fortunes to renew.

Gen. Pershing Will Address Chest Workers

Last-Minute Drive to Be Launched; Ministers Plan Appeal.

Gen. John J. Pershing will be guest of honor and speaker at the Monday luncheon meeting of Community Chest workers in the Willard Hotel. The A. E. F. commander in chief, who at one time was chairman of Community Chest governmental unit, accepted an invitation extended by Robert V. Fleming, a member of the campaign committee.

Boards of strategy held frequent meetings yesterday and area and division chairmen of the metropolitan unit checked over prospect cards in each territory and made solicitations whenever the prospects had not been reached.

Walter B. Clarkson, chairman of the group solicitation unit, held a luncheon meeting for his chief aids and laid plans for the remainder of the campaign, which closes Thursday.

Governmental Unit Active.

Meeting at the U. S. Chamber of Commerce yesterday afternoon, leaders of the governmental unit, under the direction of Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, chairman, decided to interview every governmental worker not yet approached.

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University and chairman of the speakers' unit, made a last-minute appeal to the clergy of Washington for help from the pulpits Sunday. Dr. Marvin sent a personal letter to each clergyman in the city, pointing out the gravity of the present situation, the great need that exists, and the absolute necessity for the chest's reaching its goal if the welfare problems confronting the city are to be properly met.

A number of chest workers made unofficial reports of gifts obtained or of increases made by persons who had previously pledged.

Out of Ordinary Gifts.

One check received explained that it was an additional gift in memory of a man who died recently, and that he was giving the money to the chest rather than spend it for flowers.

Another gift out of the ordinary was from a man who had just found his first job in more than a year. He specified the money should go to the Associated Charities, which had helped him and is still helping his aged father. Still another contributor said he was sacrificing his hopes for a needed new suit this winter, because he realized the misery that exists all around.

Post's Toy, Doll Fund Grows To Brighten Yuletide for Poor

$500 Next Week Is Goal; Nine Little Ladies Join Collection.

There was every indication yesterday that before tonight The Post Toy and Doll Fund will have passed the second hundred dollar mark. The next step onward is to pass the $500 mark before the end of the coming week. That is really a slight task, if every one interested will get back of The Post Toy and Doll Fund snowball and push it past that next milepost.

Nine lady dolls of many different periods with costumes made of rare brocades and silks and trimmed with lovely lace and sewn with fine delicate stitches, the art of every gentlewoman of yesterday, have joined The Post Toy and Doll Fund collection.

They will make glad the hearts of nine little Washington girls on Christmas morning. These dolls are the gift of Miss Alys Downing and were dressed by her grandmother for Miss Downing and her sisters, daughters of Mrs. A. C. Downing.

Historic Costume.

In the array of lady dolls is one dressed in a replica of the costume worn by Miss Lucy Downing, aunt of Miss Downing, at a fancy dress ball in Paris at which the American girl was proclaimed the belle. The costume is that of the famous French general, Boulagere, and has a cocked hat with feathers, a velvet vest, but a skirt of mull embroidered with a map showing the parts of the world in which this general won his laurels. A gold sword, caught with a wide red sash, goes with the costume.

A doll in the dress of the empire period, of silk and lace with the long sleeves Napoleon demanded the ladies of his families should wear at court, is called the Empress Josephine. There is a Mme. Roland and Martha Washington. All the dolls have been named at various times by the little Downing girls, who played with them.

There is in the collection of doll clothes that came with the dolls an entire bridal outfit, with long empire-train white satin dress trimmed with real lace and seed pearls.

Bud Fisher's Alimony Stays at $400 a Week

New York, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Mutt and Jeff's creator, Harry C. ("Bud") Fisher, failed today to have the alimony he is paying his wife reduced from $400 to $100 a week.

Fisher pleaded that his income had been cut from $350,000 to $31,000 a year, and that his estate has dwindled from $3,000,000 to $232,000, but the appellate court ruled the wife, Mrs. Aedita Fisher, must get her $400 weekly.

Post Toy Fund Moves in New Quarters Today

Building at 15th, New York Donated; Many Firms Volunteer Aid.

The Washington Post Toy Fund headquarters will be opened today in the Washington Building, Fifteenth street and New York avenue, northwest. The large store that will be utilized for this purpose was donated by Weaver Bros., Inc., realtors.

Immediately the public spirited action of Weaver Bros., became known, other business houses also volunteered their services and facilities to make absolutely sure that no child in Washington will fail to receive a visit from Santa Claus this coming Christmas Day.

The Palais Royal department store has provided decorative materials and the services of a corps of window-dressers to give a holiday atmosphere to Toy Fund headquarters. Representatives of The Post will be on hand from 9 a. m. to 8:30 p. m. to receive toys, or donations, with which to buy toys.

The center of the decorative scheme at Toy Fund headquarters will be a Christmas tree which, with other smaller trees and holiday shrubs, has been provided by John J. Hughes, landscape artist, Washington avenue and Memorial drive, East Falls Church, Va.

Through the cooperation of the Terminal Cab Association, toys will be called for at any local address, or Terminal Cabs may be hailed on the street.

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. promptly installed a telephone so that contributors may get in direct touch with "The Santa Claus Lady," who will be on duty from 9 a. m. to 8:30 p. m. every day until Christmas. The number is STerling 8455.

The entrance to Post Toy Fund headquarters will also be identified by signs that are being made by the artists of the S. Hanlein Sign Co., 934 D street northwest, who are donating their materials and services.

Aviation Day Proclamation Dec. 17 Sought

National Plans Call for Celebration Centering on Capital.

President Roosevelt has been asked to proclaim December 17 National Aviation day by the National Aeronautical Association.

His favorable action will add impetus to a Nation-wide celebration centering on Washington, planned for the thirtieth anniversary of the flight of the Wright brothers.

Capt. Frank Hawks, speedster, has agreed to try to bring back from Germany the record for 2,000 kilometers. He will fly over a course between Washington, Kitty Hawk, N. C., where the Wright brothers first flew, and Dayton, Ohio, their home.

Specifically, the program here will begin with a military show at Bolling Field on the afternoon of the 16th and a commercial plane show at College Park Airport on the following day.

Among the Nation's prominent fliers who will attend are Capt. Hawks, Commander T. G. W. Settle, Capt. A. C. Reid, of NC-4 fame, and Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, of the Army Air Corps.

Invitations have been sent to Jimmie Wedell, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Will Rogers and many others.

Glacier Recedes 44 Feet in Year

Nisqually Due to Disappear in 50 Centuries.

Tourists who have ideas of exploring old Nisqually glacier in Mount Rainier National Park had better hurry because the glacier may be gone in about 5,000 years, the Interior Department announced yesterday with some trepidation.

Nisqually, best known of the mountain's 22 single-peak system of 28 glaciers, has receded 44 feet during the past year. Five miles in length and located less than half a mile from a highway, the ice field annually attracts thousands of visitors who smear their faces with grease paint and don calked shoes to fathom its mysteries.

Emmons glacier receded 46 feet, South Tahoma 13, Carbon 12, and Paradise 6 feet. All except Paradise are classified as "living" glaciers, having a downward movement. Thousands of Americans have viewed Paradise glacier, which is famous for its ice caves.

Commodity Prices Decline 1 Per Cent

Level, However, Still 19 Above March 4.

The Labor Department announced yesterday that the wholesale index for the week was 71, as compared to 71.7 for the week ended November 18, the recession taking prices back toward the level of November 4, when the index was 70.9.

The fall was explained as due to a general weakening market price on scattered commodities. The figure, however, was approximately 19 per cent above the low level of March 4.

District to Get Coal for Needy

20,000 to 30,000 Tons Will Be Allotted by U. S. Relief Agency.

The District will get between 20,000 and 30,000 tons of coal from the Federal Relief Administration to keep the needy warm this winter, it was revealed yesterday with the announcement that 10,000,000 tons of coal will be purchased.

Administrator Harry L. Hopkins said an agreement had been reached with mine operators to buy anthracite coal at 70 cents a ton less than the market price and bituminous coal at 10 per cent under the NRA code schedule.
